HUMBLE BEGINNINGS

Last cycle BBL saw the introduction the Bloodbath Beacon. We saw a moderate rise in activity as well, jumping from 32 cards to 36; 17 battle royal entries to 22, and active wrestlers rise from 24 to 36. Those new entries were the result of IMT honoring their word to send representatives to BBL. One set of those IMT wrestlers joined the battle royal. The other made their trash talk debut. It would be great to see them both get involved in both activities.

I was able to get a FB group set up for this cycle. I will provide a link in this report. I was also able to converse with two of the top managers in BBL, and both are excited to get further involved in the BBL's rebirth!

MEET THE CREW!

To assist in storylines, in my responsibility as BBL's GM I have hired some BBL officials that will from here on out be known as "Management." Management is a series of personalities that are not wrestlers, but are available to use in trash talk and as vehicles to enhance storylines. Management is NOT to be the sole focus of storylines, merely a way for you to move it along. I as GM will step in as needed to push a storyline along. I will try not to break kayfabe unless absolutely necessary. These are the Management's new hires!:

Mike Tomorrow:

That's me. Might as well begin with the most important guy in the front office of BBL. I run the day-to-day operations of BBL. I have an Ivy League education and have previously been on the board of directors for a corporate entity (which will go unnamed for legal

Rewards:

- There will be no rewards this month. I will be banking the free matches and i-cash the IWA allows me each cycle into the BBL vault. We will begin distributing funds from the vault when we are up and running at full speed.
- I am in communication with out Mysterious Benefactor about getting more funds for the rewards portion of the Bloodbath Beacon, but no expense was too much in the rebranding of BBL, and as a result I am tapped out at the moment.
- Our current balance is 10 free matches and $50,000.
- I will be announcing a bounty reward later in this report, so pay attention as you read through!

Blood Brothers Community

- Our FB Group can be found here: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/881180375370586/>. Stop in and say hello. Tell us who you manage, throw out any suggestions or questions you may have. Get to know one another! Please keep the trash talk for the bulletins though. We want the board to grow, but we want the league to grow more!
- You can email me as well: IWABenefactor@gmail.com reasons). Think of me as the BBL's Paul Heyman, circa mid 90's—very involved, obsessed, I will lie to my wrestlers, but I will never lie to you, my fans—my fellow managers. I am not a wrestler, [breaking kayfabe for a moment] but I will play favorites, and will put out “hits” (calls for sneak attacks, matches against) on wrestlers who are on my bad side. To get me involved in an angle, please message me for approval and we can work things out.

The Announce Team:

The play-by-play team will consist of a rotation of three announcers. Joey Trendsetter is a very reactive, Joey Styles type who will often shout exclamations whenever a high risk or devastating move is performed. Bobby Regal is based on Jerry Lawler. He's somewhat of a heel announcer, rooting against wrestlers he doesn't like and always eyeing valets and female staff. Umberto Iglesias was planned to be the foreign correspondent for BBL's re-launch, but after the sudden passing of the long-time announcing partner of Bobby Regal, BBL promoted Iglesias. Umberto Iglesias is noticeably a nervous wreck about his announcing gig. When he gets nervous or embarrassed, he tends to stutter. When he does manager to speak in his broken English, he tends to use idioms and cliches improperly. Managers may use the Announce Team freely in their write-ups.

Backstage and On-Location Interviewer

Charlene Daniels is BBL's backstage and on-location reporter. She conducts interviews with wrestlers and managers. Daniels is from Lubbock, Texas, and speaks with a slight drawl. Daniels can be used by managers to conduct an interview or live report an event as it unfolds (read: anything not occurring in the ring). For example...

[I]f you're a face and your wrestler is running a charity car wash, Daniels can cover it. If you're a heel and you're vandalizing a face's car, Daniels can cover that as well.

Note: “Management” is used to push storylines along. Generally speaking, the less they are used, the better. They are available to you as an assist to springboard your bulletin comments to greatness; they are not there as your crutch to hold up your comments. Over reliance on Management may cause your characters to be ignored.

COMMISSIONER CHAMPIONSHIPS: COMING SOON!

BBL will soon be hosting tournaments for both its world champion and its world tag-team champion. As we are still rounding up our contenders, we have some time to come up with names for our titles.

Throw up some suggestions to me via email or via our FB group (link on page two of my report). Maybe we can get a prize together for the manager who selects the winning title name.

IMT INVASION OFF TO FAST START

In what one has to imagine could be a hell of a feud, IMT rains on VIRUS' parade. Led by mouthpiece Cesare Borgia, IMT debuted to take 4 regionals, and command of the trash talk scene in BBL #438. I am hoping this cycle we see a response from the VIRUS contingent. Borgia was as braggadocious as they come. He insulted the BBL fans. He insulted their looks; he insulted their physical fitness; he insulted their intelligence. I for one would like to see someone shut his smug mouth up. I want this so much so that the I am going to put TWO bounties on him! The wrestler who beats him by the most points in bulletin #440 wins a free league title shot, AND the wrestler who performs the best sneak attack on Borgia in bulletin #440 will receive a free battle royal entry for ANY of their BBL wrestlers! The Papal Bull better think twice before badmouthing the good people who pay hard earned money to watch the BBL wrestlers perform their hearts out each night!

SCHOOL OF HIGHER LEARNING

IMT were not the only group to get on the microphone last cycle. The EDU, spoken for by The Philosopher, called out the BBL locker room and announced their own takeover. A stable war is brewing, ladies and gents. This outta be a good one!

DOING YOUR PART

As BBL's relaunch works its way through the veins of the IWA, I would like remind everyone here that rebrands and rebuilds are not easy. Like medicine, it will take time for BBL to become one of the great IWA leagues again. We are starting this from a low point, but we have already seen improvements. The key will be to build on the improvements we have seen.

If you are enjoying the BBL's new direction, please write some trash talk. Get involved. The best way to make this league or any league better is to get your hands dirty and get involved yourself. The best way to get the BBL to grow is word of mouth. Tell your IWA friends and acquaintances about BBL. While we accept all comers here in BBL, we do prefer to have managers that will trash talk and get involved. We want to create a fertile breeding ground here in BBL that fosters and nurtures the growth of a quality in-league manager. We limit the IWA manager to 6 here because we want there to be a focus on these back pages, and not just a flood of 700 EDGE/IMT/VIRUS guys, or worse, Kartrashians. And that is nothing against those in VIRUS or IMT. So far both groups have been pulling their weight in the creative department.

Keep the faith. Get involved. Spread the word. See you next cycle!

We are live here in Green Bay, Wisconsin where Riot has just become a four time BBL League Champion

Riot: Well, looks like VIRUS has done it, again! Yes, I'm now now a four time BBL World Champ and VIRUS has now won it 14 times! We recognize there is some new "BLOOD" here in the league but we aren't going to shy away from new competition.

Governor: Once again, the President and I have won the Tag Team titles! Over the past 16 months, we have dominated the Tag Team division and have no plans of letting up. EDU, I know you left the NSL banking on easy wins and titles here in the BBL but think again!

Caesar: First off, I want to say that VIRUS 100% supports the new BBL commissioner! We are here to support him and to make the BBL better. As for an invasion, VIRUS isn't worried!

Mamba kid stands in the ring:

"First off I want give a warm welcome to our new GM Mike Tomorrow, I fully support anyone who want to make this league what it once was, so anything you need just let me know and Ill be glad to help. Now on to the new comers, I am truly glad that there is some new competitors here but all this talk about how you all are going to take over is just that talk. Sure you took some titles last cycle but that doesn't mean complete dominance like you claim. I just hope you stick around after you discover that its not going to be so easy to just dominate and not tuck tail and run when you do. With that said any one who wants to step up and take me on come get some. ."

["Con Te Partiro" performed by Andrea Bocelli plays over the PA system as burgundy red lights light the entrance ramp towards the ring. Cesare Borgia makes his way to the ring,. Golden sparks shower fans along the ramp way as The Papal Bull swaggers toward the ring with the confidence of a prophet that has burnt his bridges. Borgia grabs the microphone, soaking in his environment before speaking. Letting the the cacophony of boos dealing the arena wash over him in an awesome wave.]

"Just as I stated, the BBL is simply no match for The Papal Bull. It looks as though VIRUS foresaw our dominance. That, or we simply shocked and awed them into silence from the sheer greatness of our performance. (fans boo). In fact, the only person capable of saying words into a microphone last cycle was this philosopher. Philosophize this! (Borgia grabs his regality with his free hand, causing the arena to erupt with boos, and mothers shielding the eyes of their children. A few co-eds flood their seats). Nietzsche said that God was dead. Well Nietzsche is too. But he was wrong. God isn't dead. He's in this ring, on the microphone speaking to you right now! Back to the point... how could I expect this league to host wrestlers of speaking words into a microphone when its fans are still incapable of taking a crayon to paper! (Security holds back a few overly enthusiastic fans in the front row as the arena begins a chant not printable in IWA bulletins.). I was very upset by the reception IMT received when we first graced you with our presence. Not due to the fact you booed the greatest collection of talent this league has seen since the 90's... but the fact that you booed so loud you drowned out the vocals of the angel, the beautiful singing of Andrea Bocelli. But how could I expect you people to appreciate art and culture when you people think paint chips and Elmer's glue are part of a balanced and nutritious diet. Yeah, go ahead and boo, I booked a 30 minute spot here, and I could have booked 60 because nothing delivers ratings like The Papal Bull on the mic. And there's not a single person in that locker room that's going to put on a match, or a cut promo, that will hold a candle to what I do for ratings every time I step out that curtain. So for the next... 23 minutes, we are going to listen to my music, on repeat. Consider this your first lesson in culture, you dog toy-chewing troglodytes!

[The arena vibrates with boos as Borgia drops the microphone, "Con Te Partiro" is played at max volume, but even with the PA system dialed up to 11, it is still difficult to make out the music. BBL cuts to commercial twice before Borgia leaves.]
