BACKSTAGE SEGMENT – “Fault Lines” (Revised)

(Camera cuts to the gorilla position. Monitors flicker with in-ring action. Headsets chatter. The curtain ripples with crowd noise.)

(Standing center: a sharply dressed FAL Management Rep, flanked by security. Off to the side... Scarlett, arms folded, eyes locked down the hallway. Right on cue, Kevin Savage and The Midnight Rider step into frame. Savage immediately clocks Scarlett. A flicker of something crosses his face... then it hardens.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: Kevin. Rider. That’s far enough. (Savage keeps walking anyway. Rider matches him.) I mean it. We need to talk—now.

Kevin Savage: Then talk.

(Savage stops, calm. Rider stands just behind him.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: We’ve had reports—
(brief glance toward Scarlett)
—that you’re planning something that hasn’t been cleared.

(Savage’s eyes shift to Scarlett. No surprise. Just a quiet disappointment.)

Kevin Savage: “Reports,” huh.

Scarlett: Don’t look at me like that. I didn’t give them a blueprint.

Kevin Savage: You didn’t have to.

(Beat. The tension hums.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: Kevin, this isn’t how things work anymore. You don’t just decide to do something and expect the company to fall in line.

Midnight Rider: Funny. That’s exactly how this place started.

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: That was then.

Kevin Savage: Yeah... and now we’ve got committees and clipboards.

(Savage glances at Scarlett again.)

Kevin Savage: And people who used to stand beside me... standin’ over there.

Scarlett: I stand where I’m needed.

Kevin Savage: No. You stand where they tell you to.

(That one hits like a slap.)

Scarlett: Don’t— (She steps forward fast, almost lunging at him, finger pointed, anger breaking through. Security instinctively shifts. Rider subtly steps between just enough to keep space without escalating.) Don’t you dare talk to me like that.

(Savage doesn’t flinch.)

Kevin Savage: Then don’t act like you don’t know what that looks like.

(Scarlett’s breathing is heavier now, eyes locked on him.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: Enough. Both of you.

(They barely acknowledge him.)

Scarlett: You think this is about control? About “them”? (shakes her head) This is about you not knowing when to stop.

Kevin Savage: I know exactly when to stop.

Scarlett: No—you know how to crash.

(A beat. That one lands.)

Kevin Savage: Doesn't really matter who you called. (He steps forward slightly.) Plan's already set.

(Scarlett exhales, frustrated, trying to rein it back in.)

Scarlett: Kevin... whatever you think this is... you don't have to do it this way.

Kevin Savage: I'm not doin' it for them. (gestures vaguely toward management) And I'm not doin' it for you. (Their eyes lock again. History sitting heavy.) I'm finishing something.

Scarlett: Or ending something.

Kevin Savage: Same thing, depending how you look at it.

(The Management Rep steps in again, trying to regain control.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: If this crosses a line, I will shut it down. Do you understand?

Midnight Rider: Lines are already crossed.

(Savage turns back to Scarlett.)

Kevin Savage: There was a time you were part of this. (Scarlett's expression softens for just a flicker.) Part of the fight. Part of the risk. (His tone tightens.) That time's over.

(Scarlett swallows that, hurt flashing through the anger.)

Scarlett: That doesn't mean I stop caring.

Kevin Savage: Never said you did. (He steps past her, close enough that it lingers.) It just means you watch like everybody else.

(Rider pauses beside Scarlett, tipping his hat slightly.)

Midnight Rider: Storm's comin'.

(Savage and Rider continue toward the curtain. The crowd noise swells.)

(Scarlett turns, watching him go—angry, hurt, and powerless to stop it.)

Management Rep, Chad Jefferson: (into headset, urgent) Stay on them. I want cameras ready if they move.

(Savage stops just before the curtain. Doesn't look back.)

(Scarlett almost calls out... but doesn't.)

(Savage pushes through.)

Cut to black.
