The camera shows a highlight reel of the stars of the WTL. It ends with Ayson Aytes holding the Western Trails Heavyweight Title above his head.

Dirty Joe Ryder: "Welcome everyone to Ambitionz of a Ryder! We have a giant card tonight!"

BS: "Man, I just know that we are about to see Rex Chambers win that Heavyweight Championship! He has been on a roll and it's not old man Aytes time anymore."

DJR: "Well we do have to announce that ring announcer Robbie Baron cannot be found, so we sent BJ Cummings out in town and in the back to see if she can find him, so until then, we are not going to have a ring announcer, but you all know the big stars here in the WTL"

Zorro vs Father Arturo vs Ricky Spanish

[Arena lights dim, the crowd buzzing from the chaos already in the building.]

DJR: "Ladies and gentlemen... I got a bad feelin' in my bones... this ain't gonna be a match, this is gonna be a survival situation."

BS: "Speak for yourself, Joe—I came here to watch Ricky Spanish commit crimes and call it competition!"

Faith by Limp Bizkit echos through the arena as a glowing light opens at the entranceway and the crowd rises to its feet in confusion and awe as the pope mobile slowly rolls out onto the stage with Father Arturo standing inside, arms raised high, blessing the crowd with a calm, almost smug confidence as if he's untouchable in this moment, eyes closed in prayer as the vehicle slowly inches toward ringside.

DJR: "I never thought I'd say this in my life, but we got a man ridin' to the ring in the pope mobile."

BS: "That man ain't worried about this match, Joe—he think he got divine backup!"

The lights suddenly cut to black, followed by silence and replaced by the slow, echoing sound of hoofbeats as a single spotlight hits the entrance and reveals Zorro riding out on a black horse, cape flowing behind him, posture upright and silent, the crowd exploding as he rides forward with purpose, eyes locked on the ring like a man who already knows how this ends.

DJR: "That's not an entrance... that's a warning."

BS: "That's a bad decision is what that is—ain't no horse ready for Ricky Spanish!"

Before the moment can even settle, a loud metallic rattling interrupts everything as Ricky Spanish appears at the top of the ramp pushing a battered shopping cart overflowing with weapons—pipes, bats, chains, broken pieces of everything imaginable—as he casually strolls down the ramp, tossing weapons into the ring one by one like he's stocking shelves, grinning that dangerous grin like he's been waiting all day to hurt somebody.

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

BS (excited): "NOW we're talkin'! That's preparation! That's intelligence!"

DJR: "That's a man who should've been stopped in the parking lot!"

Zorro begins circling near ringside with the horse as Ricky suddenly stops, slowly turning his head, eyes locking onto him as he reaches into the cart and pulls out a cricket bat with zero hesitation and swings—

CRACK!

The bat connects flush with the horse's face and the animal rears up violently before bolting straight into the crowd, sending fans scattering in every direction as barricades shake, people dive out of the way, drinks fly everywhere, and the entire section erupts into chaos as security scrambles and Zorro is thrown hard to the ground.

DJR (yelling): "GOOD LORD ALMIGHTY WE GOT A STAMPEDE IN THE AUDIENCE!"

BS (laughing): "That horse just tried to business for itself, Joe!"

Ricky doesn't even look concerned, just shrugs, grabs another weapon, and slides into the ring as the bell rings and somehow, unbelievably, the match officially begins.

Ricky immediately grabs a trash can and blasts Zorro across the head as he tries to get back up while Father Arturo springs into action with a dropkick that clips Ricky in the knee, sending him stumbling before Arturo hits the ropes and launches into a springboard moonsault that wipes out both men and brings the crowd roaring to life.

DJR: "Arturo's comin' out flyin'!"

BS: "He better, Joe—Ricky ain't here for a prayer circle!"

Arturo keeps the momentum going with a missile dropkick to Zorro, then turns and dives through the ropes with a tope con hilo that crashes into Ricky against the barricade before climbing again and launching a diving crossbody that keeps the pace frantic, but the momentum shifts when Zorro regains control, grabbing Arturo and snapping him over with a suplex before turning and hauling Ricky up for a second, delivering a double suplex that echoes through the arena before popping up and planting Arturo with a running bulldog and then lifting Ricky and spiking him with a brutal tiger driver.

DJR: "Zorro just slowed this whole thing down with authority!"

BS: "He better finish it, Joe—Ricky don't stay down!"

Ricky rolls out of the ring, smiling through the pain, reaching into the wreckage and grabbing a guitar which he smashes across Arturo's back before picking up a Commodore 64 and cracking it across Zorro's skull.

BS: "THAT'S HIGH QUALITY EQUIPMENT RIGHT THERE!"

DJR: "That's destruction of property, Bud!"

The referee tries to step in to restore order but Ricky grabs him without hesitation and drives him into the mat with a piledriver, leaving him motionless.

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

DJR: “We got no referee!”

BS: “Best decision Ricky’s made all night!”

Blood begins to flow as Zorro is split open, Arturo’s face starts to swell and bleed, and Ricky looks like he’s been through a war already as Arturo reaches into his robe and pulls out a vial, throwing holy water directly into Ricky’s face which causes him to scream and stagger backward, clawing at his face as if it’s burning.

BS: “WHAT IN THE HELL?!”

DJR: “I think that might actually be holy water!”

Arturo turns and throws it at Zorro, but Zorro doesn’t react at all, standing there unfazed as the crowd buzzes at the difference before Zorro reaches behind him and draws his sword, the arena erupting as he steps forward and slashes across Ricky’s chest, carving a deep “Z” that immediately fills with blood.

Ricky looks down... then up... smiling.

He snaps the sword in half and lunges forward, attempting to gouge Zorro’s eye out with the broken blade as all three men spill into the crowd where the fight turns even uglier with chairs flying, fans scattering, and Ricky grabbing his shopping cart and ramming it full speed into Arturo, crushing him against the barricade.

Back near ringside, Zorro lifts Arturo and drills him into the floor with a crucifix bomb.

DJR: “That’s just disrespectful at this point!”

Ricky grabs Zorro moments later, hooks him, and delivers a devastating piledriver from the apron to the floor.

BS: “DRIVE HIM THROUGH THE EARTH!”

Arturo somehow climbs up, balances himself on the ropes, and launches into a poison rana that sends Ricky crashing headfirst to the floor, drawing a massive reaction from the crowd as the action barely slows before two tables are stacked in the ring and Arturo drags Zorro back inside, lifting him with everything he has and powerbombing him straight through both tables in a thunderous crash that leaves Zorro motionless.

Arturo, exhausted and bloodied, drops to his knees in the center of the ring and begins to pray as the crowd murmurs.

DJR: “He thinks it’s over...”

BS: “It ain’t over till Ricky Spanish says it is!”

Ricky slides back into the ring behind him and the two begin trading blows with Arturo gaining the upper hand, striking and kicking, building momentum until Ricky suddenly reaches into his gear and pulls out a brick and smashes it directly into Arturo’s face, dropping him instantly.

Before Ricky can capitalize, King Cowboy Schlit storms the ring and cracks Ricky across the back with a barbed wire baseball bat.

BS: “OH COME ON NOW!”

Zorro, somehow alive, crawls back into the ring as Arturo stumbles to his feet and turns—

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

Z-STRIKE SUPERKICK.

Arturo drops.

The referee crawls back into position.

ONE... TWO... THREE.

DJR: "IT'S OVER! IT'S OVER!"

BS: "Ricky got robbed! That man got ROBBED!"

Zorro stands barely upright, blood pouring, victorious in absolute chaos while Arturo lies motionless and Ricky Spanish, despite everything, begins laughing from the mat as the camera pulls back on the wreckage.

DJR: "I don't know what we just witnessed... but Zorro survived it all here tonight at Ambitionz of a Ryder!"

BS: "And this ain't over, Joe... not by a long shot..."

Result: Zorro over Father Arturo and Ricky Spanish

DJR: "Whelp lets go backstage to BJ Cummings to see if she can find our ring announcer"

BJ Cummings: "I'm backstage looking for Robbie Baron, let's ask Mr. Pennynickel, I know you are preparing for the Bunkhouse Stampede, but have you seen Robbie Baron?"

Mr. Pennynickel: "I said I ain't getting in a match on the preshow - it don't make me enough money. As far as Robbie goes, he said something about his voice so I sent'em to the apothecary."

BJC: "Alright well I guess we will see if he comes back, back to Bud and Joe."

DJR: "BJ, why don't you go down to that apothecary and see if you can find him."

BJ looks very annoyed. As she walks away she passes two men in Machine masks

Bud Stone: "Alright, next we have those Cartwrights who are always running their mouths and being creepy with BJ taking on one of my favorite teams, the cocky New Kids."

DJR: "And a reminder, that this match is in the Tag Condors tournament - with a win each team will still have a chance to earn the upcoming title shot and the loser will be eliminated!"

Bud Stone counts on his fingers and shakes his head

The Cartwrights (Joe & Eric) vs The New Kids (Hollywood & Justice)

BS: "If you say so, let's head down to the ring af or the action! That dork Joe is starting it off"

Little Joe is a blur of motion, using his signature speed to frustrate Kidd Justice with a series of dropkicks and a lightning-fast armdrag that sends Justice scrambling to his corner.

DJR: "Whoa, what a hot start for Little Joe, who is coming at them fast!"

Hollywood Kid catches Joe with a cheap shot from the apron, allowing the New Kids to isolate the smaller Cartwright. They've spent the last few minutes cutting the ring in half, tagging frequently and wearing Joe down with technical precision as the taunt the crowd..

BS: "I'm not surprised that Little Joe got all tuckered out from going fast, Word around the locker room is that he is the same way with the ladies, and that he earned name Little Joe."

DJR: "That is just conjecture and why are you talking about his.... here comes a double team!"

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

The crowd erupts as Little Joe finally ducks a double-clothesline and makes the desperate, diving hot tag to Hoss, who enters the ring like a freight train, leveling Kidd Justice with a massive shoulder block before catching a flying Hollywood Kid mid-air into a Fallaway slam.

BS: “Every good wrestler has the Fallaway Slam in their repertoire”

After clearing Kidd Justice from the ring with a thunderous big boot, Hoss focuses his gaze on the dazed Hollywood Kid.

DJR: “Them Cartwrights are taking control and the crowd here love it!”

With a nod from Little Joe, who then hits Justice with a suicide dive to the outside, Hoss scoops the Hollywood Kid high into the air. He holds him there for a heartbeat before driving him into the canvas with a Hoss Slam.

BS: “No! Kick out! 1...2....3! Ugh! The Cartwrights get the win! I hope your math was wrong. I don't want them to get a tag title shot. And these idiot fans are cheering.”

Result: The Cartwrights over The New Kidds in the Tag Contenders Series

DJR: “Those fans pay your bills! Before we get back to the action, lets go back to BJ

BJ Cummings is at eh local apothecary looking for Ring Announcer Robbie Baron

BJC: “NowI am at the Apothecary. Oh there is Dr. Pain getting some prescriptions, Dr. Pain?”

Dr. Pain: “Hello BJ, what can I help you with? Do you need a special pill because you....”

BJC: “Um no, have you seen Robbie Baron? He said something about him losing his voice.”

Pharmacist: “Ah Robbie, he bought some slippery elm and marshmallow root, then left.. He mentioned something about needing some tea to soothe his voice. Hi how can I help you”

A masked Machine puts some protein powder on the counter to purchase it.

BJC: “Looks like we are still need to find him. Where would he find tea? Back to you Joe & Bud.”

DJR: “Alright, I guess BJ will keep looking for Robbie. Up next we have the Bastard Sons taking on The Young Guns (Holubowski & Reinhard) and the winner will be the #1 contender.”

BS: “I'm glad your math was wrong earlier, I like the Bastard Sons here, but does it matter?”

DJR: “Why do you say that?””

BS: “Have you seen the Disembowlers in the ring? And what they did to the Bluebloods?”

DJR: “Now both these teams are double tough, let's get this match started

Bastard Sons (Turnbuckle Kid & Whiskey Wade Everett) vs The Young Guns (Holubowski & Reinhard)

BS: “A mix of styles, we start with Whiskey Wade and Holubowski in the center of the ring.”

Tyler Holubowski is a blur of motion, using the ropes like a springboard to keep the Bastard Sons off-balance. Every time Whiskey Wade Everett tries to plant his feet for a heavy right hand, he's met with a dropkick or a lightning-fast armdrag. Renegade Riley Reinhard is matching that intensity, showing off a crisp technical prowess that has the veteran brawlers looking lustered.

DJR: “The Bastard Sons are trying to turn this into a dirty alley fight, but the Guns are simply too quick and athletic thus far”

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

The Turnbuckle Kid tries to introduce a steel chair into the mix, but the referee catches him in the act, forcing a clumsy retreat. Reinhard catches Wade with a rolling forearm that sends the big man reeling into the corner. Before the Bastard Sons can regroup the Young Guns execute a perfect isolation play: Tyler soars through the air with a cross-body to take out the Kid on the floor, leaving Wade Everett wide open in the center of the ring.

BS: "This ref is calling it too tight - how are guys like Wade supposed to keep up?"

Riley hoists a dazed Wade into position as Tyler springs back onto the apron for the assist. With a thunderous impact, they nail the New Warrior Neckbreaker, driving Wade into the canvas

DJR: "1....2....3. The Young Guns take the win and are number one contenders!"

Result: The Young Guns over the Bastard Sons to win the Tag Contenders Series

BS: "Well I hope that the Young Guns are ready to fight when it is Texas Tornado Rules"

DJR: "That's a story for another day, let's check in with BJ to see if we can find Robbie

BJ Cummings is at a Chick-fil-a.

BJC: "Well I know Robbie likes a sweet tea from Chick-fil-a, so I thought I'd come here."

BJ looks at her phone and sees that it is Sunday.

BJC: "Well I guess he isn't here, so I figure out where else he will find some tea. Back to you."

BS: "Thanks BJ, Chick-fil-a is the best and most American food in America!"

DJR: "I don't know about all that, but I do know that we are in for a wild Texas Tornado Trios Title match-up. It looks like the Buckshots are dressed as birds? This is getting out of hand!"

Texas Tornado Trios Title Match:

The Maryland Bluebloods vs The Buckshots (Bo, Benji, & Billy)

DJR: "It appears that Prince George and Cecil are.... Scared of the birds?"

Billy is flapping his "wings" with violent intensity, Bo is cocking his head at a 90-degree angle, and Benji is scratching at the canvas like a frantic hen. Prince George and Cecil have left the ring.

BS: "What is going on with Cecil and Prince George? They have big ol pupils and bloodshot eyes."

The Buckshots run at Garrett, who in self defense is throwing haymakers with desperate fury, cracking Bo across the beak, but he can't be everywhere at once. The three Buckshots take advantage and have Garrett on the mat. They now turn their attention to the other Bluebloods.

DJR: "This match could be over quick if the other Bluebloods don't snap out of it."

Billy Buckshot takes flight from the top rope, a flurry of feathers descending upon Cecil, who screams "THE EAGLES ARE COMING!" and dives onto Cecil. Meanwhile, Benji is pecking at Prince George's expensive loafers, sending the nobleman into a hissy fit. Now Bo has a rope and is looking to tie up Garrett as Billy comes back into the ring.

BS: "Here comes the... wait what is that noise?"

All of the sudden, Zorro's horse comes back to ringside. Benjo jumps on the horse's back and goes flying through the air, flying and counces off a concrete pillar.

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

BS: "That reminded me of that Budweiser commercial"

DJR: "They aren't a sponsor of our show, I think the ref has called for the bell."

As Bo checks on Benjo. Garrett and Billy work to get the horse under control and calmly walk him out of the arena.

Result: NO CONTEST between the Bluebloods & Buckshots

BS: "Where the hell was that goody two shoes Zorro? Playing cards again? With Tonto?"

DJR: "And what was going on with the Bluebloods - These two teams will meet again soon enough. Let's see if BJ has found Robbie yet."

BJ Cummings is outside the Bluebloods estate. A Masked Machine walks by in the background.

BJC: "I thought that if he was looking for tea, he would come to the home of the Bluebloods. You know that the guys aren't here, but wait, their butler appears to be rushing towards me."

Butler: "I served this Robbie fellow some tea for he was hoarse in the throat. However, afterwards he started to talk about seeing all sorts of things and different colors - real gone quite mad. He said that he needed more tea and was off to Chick-fil-a to get more tea and lemon for his throat."

BJ:C: "Ummm... did you serve his this tea, that would explain why."

BJ holds up an empty package of Groove's Special Tea. (NWL reference)

BJC: "Well I guess I'm going to the old Saloon to try find Robbie."

DJR: "That explains why the Bluebloods were acting that way. Now who is this Groove feller?"

BS: "Those guys have style! I'd invite them to go see some dancing ladies out west."

DJR: "There won't be any dancing in our next match, for the Texas Tornado Tag titles."

Texas Tornado Tag Title Match:

The Disembowlers: Meat Hook & Mongrel vs Mystic & Fallen Angel

BS: "Those Disembowlers are some bad men, Meat Hook is starting out against Fallen Angel."

Meat Hook and Mongrol don't even wait for a legal start, charging across the ring like a pair of runaway semi-trucks. Fallen Angel is driven into the corner by a series of clubbing forearms from Meat Hook, while Mongrol knocks Mystic to the ground with a shoulder block, then starts to stomp him. The Disembowlers toss Mystic out of the ring and bludgeon Fallen Angel in the corner before taunting the crowd

DJR: "This is their first PPV defense, but the Disembowlers look dominant, but the Angels have taken on some thought teams in the past and come up on top."

As they are taunting the crowd, Mystic hits a springboard dropkick that staggers Meat Hook and Fallen Angel connecting with a flurry of lightning-fast strikes. The referee is distracted trying to get Mystic back to his corner, Mongrol reaches into his trunks for a hidden object, leveling Fallen Angel with a blatant throat thrust that leaves him gasping for air. Taking full advantage of the chaos, Meat Hook pulls the referee's vision away just long enough for the duo to execute a The Evisceration

BS: "That'll be all she wrote. The Disembowlers will leave with their tag title Belts."

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

Result: The Disembowlers retain the Texas Tornado Tag titles over Fallen & Mystic Angel

DJR: "I can't wait to see them take on the Young Guns, but before we go to our next match, let's check in with BJ and see if we can find the ring announcer."

BJ Cummings is at an old west saloon

BJC: "Well I don't see Robbie here, but I do see a group of three guys wearing those same masks, let me go to the bartender and see what he knows."

Bartender: "Robbie? Yeah that guy came in and ordered some sort of fancy martini or sumthin' I said I had something that I knew would help his voice, so I gave him some whiskey. After he tasted it he said he needed to go to the big city for a mixologist or gynecologist or something."

BJC: "Does that help a sore throat?"

Bartender: "No, but it helps you forget about it. Welcome back Wade, the usual?"

The bartender fills a pint glass with whiskey and hands it to Whiskey Wade

BJC: "Well, I guess it's off to the train station, back to you guys."

DJR: "Next up, one final chapter in the feud of 2025 - Cowboy Schlitz vs Mange for the next shot at the Western Trails Heavyweight title. As they make their way to the ring, let's see some highlights in our new picture in picture feature of their interactions at and leading up to War Games last year!"

Mange goes straight to the ring, focused and ready as we see highlights of Mange bloodying the Four Horsemen, followed by Schlitz slowly walking to the ring jawing at fans with his highlights.

Number One Contenders Match: King Cowboy Schlitz vs Mange

BS: "Now we get to see King Cowboy Schlitz finish off Mange once and for all!"

As soon as the bell rings, Mange lunges forward with a series of erratic, closed-fist strikes that force Schlitz into the corner. Schlitz catches a wild swing and shoves Mange back, cockily. Mange rolls backward, pops up to his feet, and stares intensely at Schlitz as they stare down in the center of the ring.

DJR: "Mange ain't backing down - we are in for a slobber knocker!"

Schlitz locks up, thumbs Mange in the eyes and lifts him high for a vertical suplex and holding him suspended in the air for several seconds just to show off his strength. He slams Mange down, but Mange immediately scrambles to his feet and drives his shoulder into Schlitz's midsection, tackling him through the ropes and onto the floor. The two trade heavy blows against the barricade. Mange grabs a steel chair, but instead of swinging it, he tosses it aside to deliver a stiff headbutt that leaves both men reeling. Schlitz recovers first, hitting a devastating powerbomb onto the ring apron, then rolls Mange back inside,

BS: "I knew that Schlitz would be able to comeback and win the match."

DJR: "Mange is far from done, he never quits!"

Schlitz follows up with a series of deliberate elbow drops and a standing splash, pinning Mange with just one foot on his chest to show his disdain. Mange kicks out at one, but Schlitz immediately locks in a tight chinlock, leaning his full weight into Mange's spine.

BS: "What about now Joe! Ahahahahaha"

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

Mange bites Schlitz's forearm to break a clinch, sparking a frantic comeback. Mange unleashes a flurry of clotheslines, finally taking the big man down with a desperate, running crossbody that sends both crashing into the ropes. Mange mounts Schlitz, raining down erratic punches before pulling him up for a high-angle belly-to-back suplex. Just as Mange climbs the turnbuckle for a finishing blow, Schlitz recovers, crotches Mange on the top rope, and hits a heat seeker DDT on Mange from the top to the mat.

DJR: "Now that might be it, Mange is tough, but...1...2... No Mange kicked out!"

All of the sudden a man with a Tuscon Tall Boys mask shows up on the entrance ramp. Schlitz is smiling in the ring. He tosses Mange outside the ring, and distracts the ref as the masked man hits Mange with a brick and then stomps him a couple times.

BS: "Yeah Schlitz! We all remember who was under those masks in Tucson. The Disembowlers!"

DJR: "I knew the old Cowboy would have some insurance. It's a shame because this was such a great match-up. Oh sure now you pay attention ref and you want to check on Mange."

As the ref checks on Mange outside with medics, the masked man goes into the ring and holds out brass knuckles. Schlitz starts to smile, but then stops dead in his tracks, as the masked man takes a bottle of Schlitz out of his pocket and smashes it over the Cowboy's head. As Schlitz staggers back he unloads a massive right hand with the knuckles across Schlitz face.

BS: "What in the? Why?"

The masked man slides out of the ring and stand at the top of the entrance ramp. Mange gets back into the ring and he hits the Infection and the ref rings the bell. The masked man on the top of the entrance ramp takes off his mask, and it is Ricky Spanish, grinning ear to ear.

Result: Mange defeated King Cowboy Schlitz to become the number one contender.

DJR: "Mange is going to America's Most Wanted to challenge for the Western Trails Heavyweight Title! You dig up what you plant, and Schlitz just got his, he stuck his nose in Ricky's Business earlier and now he got his revenge. Wait what is Spanish doing!"

Ricky Spanish rushes to the ring to attack Schlitz some more. The Locker room empties and a melee ensues. There are dozens of people out fighting - from stars to the curtain jerkers. Finally, Dirty Joe Ryder gets on the PA system.

DJR: "ENOUGH! SCHLITZ AND SPANISH - you want to fight each other so bad? You got it! You will both be heading to the IWAR Supershow and America's Most Wanted - the details can be worked out later, but we need to settle this. And since you are all out here anyway, Let's start the Bunkhouse Stampede! Ring the bell!"

The $500,000 Bunkhouse Stampede

The bell rings. Spanish and Schlitz are brawling all the way to the back with security guards littered on the ground who attempted to break them up.

BS: "These two won't quit! They don't even care about the money, just about the fight!"

Marshal Reeves isn't waiting around, tossing the Elderly Mortician over the turnbuckle, while 'Nat' J. Love just launched Ben Whittaker out of the ring!! Hoss Cartwright and The Pale Rider are already cleaning house, disposing of the Fireworks Kid and Sam Loomis before they could even get their bearings.

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

Terror Machine is on a rampage, catapulting Bill Pearl and Black Mamba into the audience like they weigh nothing at all. Shadow Machine is following suit, tossing Bob Barker and the Root Beer Kid out of the squared circle. But Jurassic Machine is the one truly dominating the landscape—he just flipped Judge Wapner into the ringside chairs and hurled Prince George Montgomery out of the ring with terrifying ease!

DJR: “Look at these newcomers in the masks - how many of them are there? I don’t know but they are dominating thus far!”

The veterans are trying to stem the tide. Zorro is showing off his technical brilliance, scoring three quick eliminations including Riley Reinhard. Father Arturo Bartolo is providing a heavy dose of reality, tossing Johnny Gaines over the top rope! Meanwhile, Wally Burke has turned into a one-man wrecking crew, successfully eliminating four different competitors to keep his chances alive. Even the big men like the Disembowelers are getting their licks in, tossing opponents to the concrete floor.

BS: “I can’t even keep track of who is left, This is wild, even for the wild west.”

Cecil Howard Calvert just catapulted Little Joe Cartwright out, only to be neutralized himself. After a flurry of heavy hitting, the ring has finally cleared, leaving only two men standing: the gritty Wyoming Cowboy and the unstoppable Jurassic Machine.

DJR: “I have to say that this is a surprise - two men are left fighting it out for half a million bucks!”

The Wyoming Cowboy is landing massive haymakers, rocking Jurassic Machine. He’s got the Machine leaning precariously against the ropes! The crowd is on its feet as the Cowboy charges in for one final clothesline to take out Jurassic Machine, but he side steps and another man in a Machine mask smashes The Wyoming Cowboy in the head with a steel chair. Jurassic Machine takes advantage and press slams The Wyoming Cowboy out of the ring.

Result: Jurassic Machine wins the Bunkhouse Stampede and the $500,000 prize (by having the most (6) Battle Royal eliminations

BS: “What a debut for these Machines. I don’t know about their masks, but they had quite a showing.”

DJR: “You have to give it the Wyoming Cowboy, I see Johnny Gaines and Marshal Reeves out there to help him now, but he was just out numbered. Well there are strength in numbers, and whoever it is in the Jurassic Machine Mask, he punched his ticket to America’s Most Wanted and the #1 contenders match.”

BS: “It doesn’t matter, because my boy, the guy that has been setting the WTL on fire, Ravishing Rex Chambers is about to win the title here tonight!”

DJR: “Well before the final match, let’s go back to BJ to see if she has found Robbie.”

BJ looks annoyed from a dimly lit train station

BJC: “What the hell? I’ve been on this creepy platform forever waiting. I did have enough time to go through the records here and it appears Robbie bought a ticket to go to Los Angeles. Mystery solved.”

We go back to the arena with a jubilant Joe Ryder

DJR: “Just wait there for him to come back or go to Los Angeles to find him BJ! We are so close!”

It goes back to BJ at the train station and she tosses her heels at the cameraman

BJC: “You know what, I’ve been walking all over in these fancy heels all night trying to find Robbie. You know what - I don’t care anymore. Robbie ain’t coming back tonight. There is only one train leaving tonight and that ain’t going to Los Angeles, its going to Wyoming. I’m leaving.”

As BJ walks away, the Wyoming Cowboy limps onto the dimly lit platform, Bunkhouse Stampede dust still clinging to his gear, the distant whistle of an approaching train cutting through the cold night air. At first it’s just one figure near the tracks—a black-and-silver mask catching the light—but then another steps out from behind a crate, and another from the shadows of the station house.

AMBITIONS OF A RIDER

The Cowboy squares his shoulders, jaw tight, as the circle slowly closes, boots echoing in unnatural unison. “You boys lost?” he mutters, but there’s no answer. There is just synchronized steps forward by the multiple men in Machine masks. The Cowboy swings first, dropping one Machine with a right hand, then another with a desperate lariat, but they don’t react like men; they absorb, advance, replace. Hands seize him from behind, another drives into his ribs, another sweeps his legs, and suddenly he’s on the platform, fighting upward as black shapes blot out the station lights. The assault becomes mechanical, relentless, precise, with one Machine holding him upright while another delivers a crushing strike to his knee, a third driving a forearm across his throat. The train roars past without stopping, wind whipping coats and masks alike, and in its thunder the swarm descends fully, a mass of identical figures overwhelming him until the struggle fades and the Cowboy lies motionless beneath them—before, just as silently as they came, the Machines step back in eerie unison and disappear into the night, leaving only the battered body on the platform and the faint, lingering impression that there were far more of them than there should have been. The camera cuts back to the arena.

BS: “Ain’t nothing good ever happen at a train station after dark. I thought this was a limit league?”

DJR: “Kayfabe! I don’t remember signing that many machines to contracts, I hope that Wyoming is okay, but now it’s time for the main event - no matter how you slice it, Ayson Aytes and Rex Chambers are two of the toughest dudes to ever step in the ring. No more talking, it’s time for the main event!”

The Main Event for the Western Trails Heavyweight Championship:

“Ravishing” Rex Chambers vs “The Outlaw” Ayson Aytes

“Going Down” by Sick Puppies blares on the sounds system as Rex Chamber makes his way down to the ring. The crowd is on its feet and Chambers looks as confident as ever.

BS: “Rex looks ready - he has been in big matches before, this time won’t be any different.”

Ayson Aytes enters with a cigar in his mouth, cowboy hat on his head, and a grin on his face. As he hoists the Western Trails Heavyweight title above his head. If there is music playing, we can’t here it above the noise in the arena.

DJR: “I’m not a gambler, but I wouldn’t bet against Ayson, he might be the toughest guy in the league.”

The bell rings and Ayson Aytes charges immediately, forcing Rex Chambers into the corner with a series of heavy shoulder blocks. The champion uses his superior power to toss Chambers across the ring with a release belly-to-back suplex. Aytes keeps the pressure on, clubbing Chambers with closed fists and a running big boot that sends the challenger reeling toward the ropes.

BS: “Chambers needs to get out of the ring and regroup. It might be time to go to Plan B.”

Chambers rolls under the bottom rope to the floor to catch his breath, but Aytes follows him out. The two trade stiff forearm smashes against the steel barricade. Chambers gains an opening by dodging a charging Aytes, sending the champion’s shoulder into the ring post. They brawl around the ringside area, alternating control with head-on-the-apron strikes and Irish whips into the steps before the referee’s count forces them back inside.

DJR: “Now I know Chambers is a smart man, but I gotta say that going outside to brawl with Aytes might not be the brightest thing in the world. Aytes looks to be bleeding, but he isn’t slowing down.”

Once back in the ring, Chambers shifts his strategy to focus on Aytes’ left leg. He kicks at the back of the knee and applies a step-over toehold, grinding his weight down to neutralize the champion’s base. Aytes tries to fight out with elbows, but Chambers transitions into a sharp dragon screw leg whip. Every time Aytes attempts to stand and use his brawling power, Chambers clips the limb again to keep him grounded.

BS: "Haha yeah! That is the strategy that I though Chambers would have."

DJR: "I have to admit that this is a sart strategy by Chambers, but Aytes keeps on coming back."

Aytes eventually finds an opening, catching a mid-level kick and tries to hit a powerbomb, but his leg gives away. Chambers whips Aytes into the ropes, but Aytes digs deep and hits Chambers with a vicious lariat! The impact leaves both competitors flat on the mat, motionless and exhausted. The referee begins a standing ten-count as they slowly crawl toward the ropes to pull themselves up.

BS: "I think that would've been all if Aytes had more energy, He cracked Chambers so hard he is bleedin from the mouth. What a match-up here tonight."

Both men trade punches from their knees, eventually rising to their feet to exchange Haymakers in the center of the ring as the crowd rises to their feet. Aytes winds up for a finishing blow, but his weakened leg buckles slightly, slowing his momentum. Chambers avoids the strike, hooks Aytes' arm, and executes a crisp northern lights suplex to bridge for a near-fall.

DJR: "Picture perfect precision by Chambers! Aytes kicks out!"

Chambers locks in a figure four, and agony is on Aytes face. 1...2.... Aytes gets his shoulder off the mat.. He crawls to the ropes and gets out of the figure four. Chambers is going for the camber of pain, Aytes sneaks out the back for a German suplex,, then he rolls through for another, and now a 3rd German Suplex with a bridge as the crowd chants 'Eddie!' 1...2... and Aytes leg gives out allowing Chambers to kick out! As Aytes goes to his feet, Chambers lunges and takes out Aytes knee from behind.

BS: "That looked really awkward. Chambers did what he had to do."

Chambers staggers to his feet, and Aytes gets up and signals for a big lariat to end this, but he limps towards Chambers. Chambers maneuvers behind the champion and successfully executes the High Roller. Aytes hits the canvas hard, and Chambers hooks the leg.

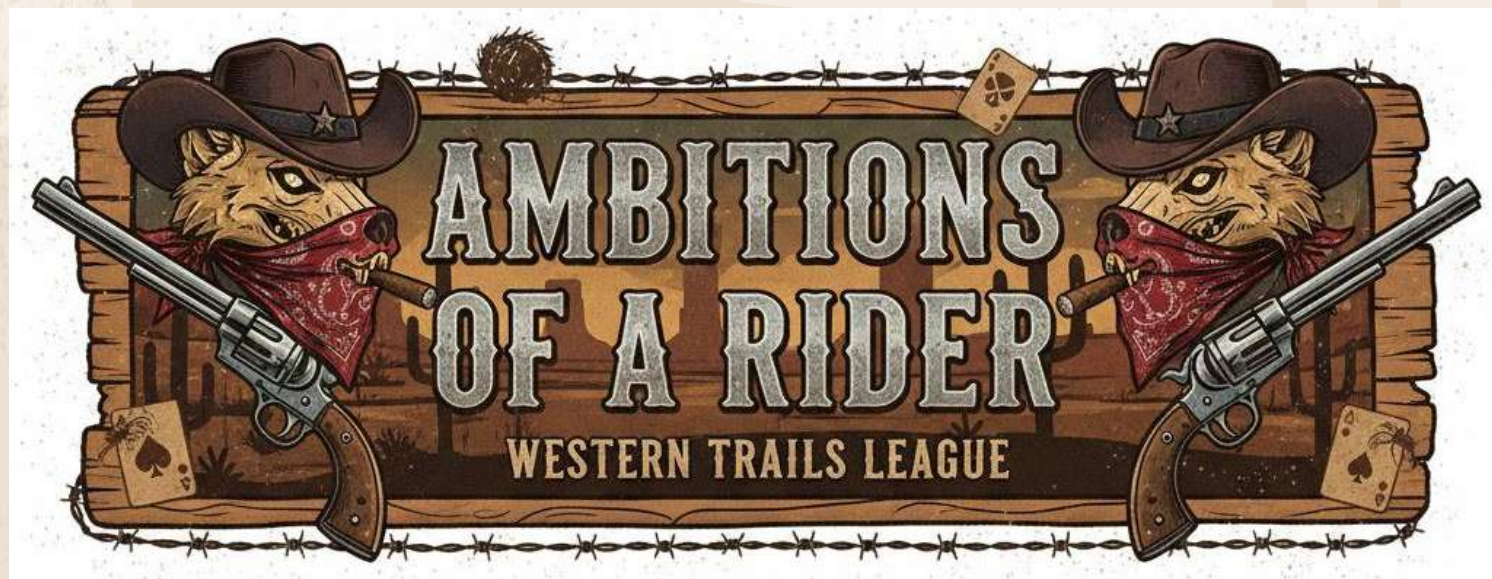

DJR: "1....2.....3! REX CHAMBERS is the new Western Trails Heavyweight Champion!"

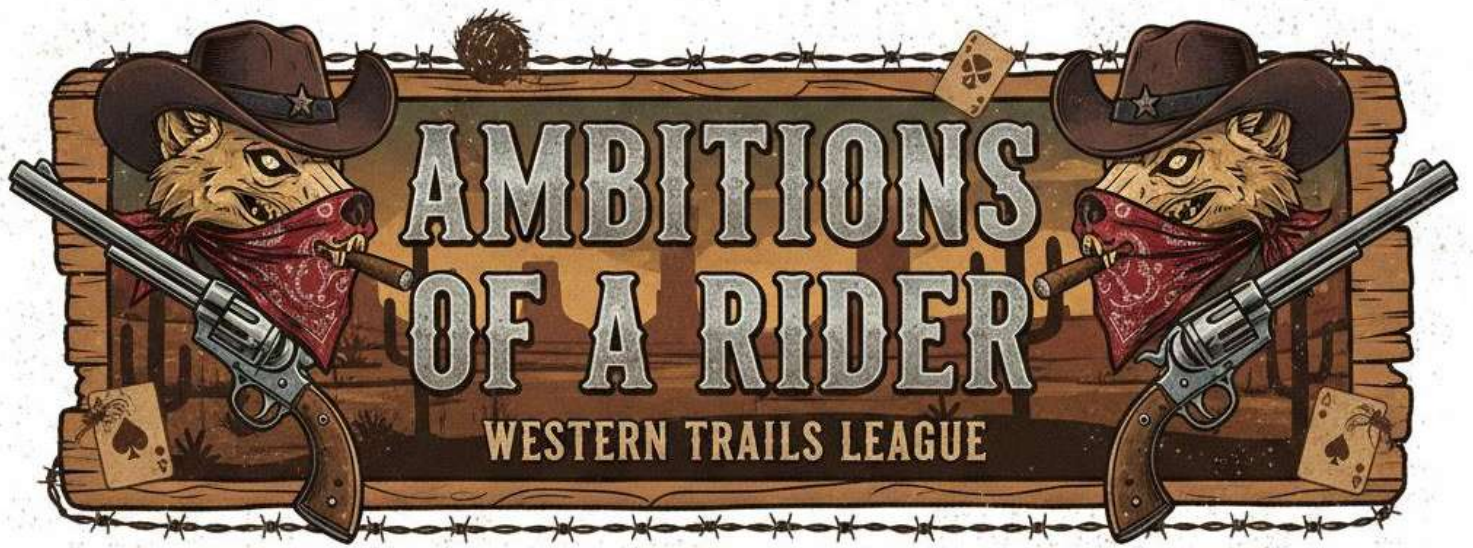

Result: "Ravishing" Rex Chambers defeated Ayson Aytes to win the Western Trails Heavyweight Championship!

BS: "I knew Rex could do it! Can anyone stop Rex Chambers?"

DJR: "We will see this summer at America's Most Wanted if Mange can stop Chambers. For Bud and BJ, this is Dirty Joe Rider, signing off from Ambitions of a Rider!"

The camera cuts to Rex Chamber celebrating in the ring and Ayson Aytes putting out his hand to shake. The two shake hands as Chambers jaws to the crowd and lifts the title above his head. The camera cuts to a view in the back corner of the arena, where Mange is staring at the new champion. The camera zooms in on Chambers one last time and the broadcast ends.

MARYLAND BLUE BLOODS

*Frederick Charles Harford
Cecil Howard Calvert
Prince George Montgomery
Garrett Washington Alleghany*

The Bluebloods are watching a replay of their match from Ambitions of a Rider.

Billy Buckshot takes flight from the top rope, a flurry of feathers descending upon Cecil, who screams "THE EAGLES ARE COMING!" and dives onto Cecil. Meanwhile, Benji is pecking at Prince George's expensive loafers, sending the nobleman into a hissy fit. Now Bo has a rope and is looking to tie up Garrett as Billy comes back into the ring.

All of the sudden, Zorro's horse comes back to ringside. Benjo jumps on the horses back and goes flying through the air, flies and bounces off a concrete pillar.

Prince George Montgomery "What an embarrassment. To think, it was all because of some tainted tea from those NWL lads. Talking about clapping cheeks, how unrefined."

Cecil Howard Calvert: "I had thought I dreamed that the Buckshots were dressed as birds and that a horse ran through the match. I am glad that we left with the titles. "

Garett: "That's why I just stick to my Arizona Ice Teas from the store. Sweet tea never made me see nothing crazy, except that one time I went to my grandmother's house and she wass"

Frederick: "Garett, please spare us the recount of that story. We have tag titles to defend."

Prince George Montgomery "More importantly, we have the Marano Memorial Finals against the Van Snapps. Now they are not some rookie team like the last few teams, they are the defending champions and quite honestly, almost royals like us with their lineage. Except that their lineage is from random three penny uprights and there father Victor."

Garett: "I don't know what you can get for three pennies today. I reckon not any sort of upright or upleft. Well you two hurry back, we have the new team the Special Forces and the Buckshots again in somesort of train fight called the 521 to Yuma match. Aren't you going to have tea?"

Prince George Montgomery "Maybe we will drink this sweet tea of yours just until we can have Jeeves thoroughly clean all of our brewing vessels, teaware, and heating apparatus."

Prince George and Frederick leave, grabbing Arizona Iced Teas with a disgusted look on their faces

CONFESSSIONAL CORNER

Father Arturo

*Father Arturo is seen standing at the remnants of his old Western church that was burnt to the ground by Ricky Spanish going to Ambitions of a Rider

“As I look around, at first, I felt sadness, for the beautiful building I had constructed had collapsed. Also, between Zorro & Ricky Spanish, I did not fare well at Ambitions of a Rider. Finally, Padre Conrad has informed me that he will not return for a while. As I felt the pit in my stomach, I then realized that spring is a season of rebirth! Even the one on high need to rise again! Then, I realized that my higher calling is not for glory, but to help these heathens! Mr. Cordova, you put your faith in your book, when there is a much better book for you to read and follow! Mr. Pennynickel, perhaps if you gave your tithe to the church, you would receive the blessings of an appearance on a PPV! Ricky Spanish obviously needs our prayers, That snake in the grass, Riley Orton and the drunkard Whiskey Wade Everett. Finally, these Nutty Bunnies, making a mockery and secular joke about the most holy of days! There are many that need saving here!

“Then, I looked around and saw that there were already some missionaries here! They have struggled, but I know that their prayers shall be answered! I have already won gold with Father Jack Manson. And what great timing! My church has burnt, but I found my flock! Peace be with you!”

Arturo makes the sign of the cross & exits

WTL AMBITIONS OF A RIDER -- POST-MATCH PROMO

HOSS AND LITTLE JOE CARTWRIGHT

The camera finds the Cartwright corner. Hoss is sitting on the ring apron, breathing hard, a towel around his neck. Little Joe stands beside him, still wired, still moving the way smaller men do after a big fight -- like the electricity has nowhere to go.

BJ Cummings steps into frame, microphone in hand, blonde hair perfect despite the chaos of the evening. Little Joe notices immediately. He straightens up. Runs a hand through his hair.

LITTLE JOE: (to Hoss, not quite under his breath) Now that is a better way to end the night.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (without looking up from his towel) Joseph.

LITTLE JOE: I'm just saying.

BJ CUMMINGS: (smiling, professional, having clearly been here before with Little Joe) Hoss, Little Joe -- the Cartwrights advance in the Tag Contenders tournament. Your thoughts?

Little Joe takes the microphone. His eyes linger on BJ just a half second longer than necessary.

LITTLE JOE: BJ, I have been waiting all night for someone worth talking to. You look wonderful, by the way. Have I mentioned that?

BJ CUMMINGS: Several times.

LITTLE JOE: It bears repeating.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (standing up) Can we talk about the match?

LITTLE JOE: (snapping back, grinning) Right. Yes. The match.

(He straightens up, shifts into business mode -- though the grin doesn't fully leave.)

The New Kids are tough. I'll say that clean. They came in here tonight with something to prove and they went about proving it hard. Nobody watching should think those boys can't compete in this league. They can.

But tonight was about a Texas Tornado Tag title shot. And when the stakes are that high, tough isn't enough. You need together. You need to know what your partner is going to do before he does it.

(He glances at Hoss.)

Me and this big man have been riding the same trail our whole lives. Same land, same table, same father telling us how to be. You cannot buy that in a training camp. You either have it or you don't.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (takes the microphone) Tonight we had it and they didn't. That was the match right there.

And Bud Stone -- you sat at that commentary desk and called me a simpleton. Told me I needed to worry about the New Kids. Well, Bud, the Cartwrights are in the final round of the Tag Contenders tournament. You can go ahead and work that into your commentary whenever you're ready.

(He hands the microphone back toward BJ. Little Joe intercepts it and hands it back himself, making sure the handoff takes a little longer than it needs to.)

LITTLE JOE: (to BJ, quieter) We should celebrate sometime. The Cartwrights are going to be very busy winning championships. You're going to want a front row seat for all of that.

BJ CUMMINGS: (taking the microphone back) I'll keep that in mind, Joe.

LITTLE JOE: (calling back as Hoss steers him up the aisle by the shoulder) I mean it, BJ. Front row.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (to Little Joe, walking) You are unbelievable.

LITTLE JOE: (to Hoss) She smiled though.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: She is a professional.

LITTLE JOE: She smiled, Hoss.

(They disappear up the aisle arguing about it. The crowd laughs.)

WTL AMBITIONS OF A RIDER -- POST-MATCH PROMO

ZORRO

The arena lights are low. The crowd is still buzzing from the triple threat. A single spotlight finds the center of the ring.

Zorro stands there alone. Mask on. Cape draped over one shoulder. The sword is sheathed. He is in no hurry.

He looks to his left. He looks to his right. Two men gave everything they had tonight, and neither of them is standing where he is standing. He takes a moment to appreciate that fact before he speaks.

ZORRO: Ricky Spanish came with confidence. With speed. With a mouth that has not stopped moving since the day he arrived in the Western Trails League.

Father Arturo came with a collar and a collection plate.

(His jaw tightens slightly behind the mask.)

Let me be very clear about something. I have spent my life fighting on behalf of people who have been taken advantage of. Corrupt magistrates. Dishonest landowners. Men in positions of authority who use that authority to reach into the pockets of those who cannot fight back. That is the enemy Zorro was made to face.

And Father Arturo -- that collar around his neck is the finest costume in this league. It is better than my mask. My mask announces what I am. His disguises it.

(He steps forward.)

He wraps himself in the cloth of the Church and he asks people to trust him, to believe in him, to follow where he leads -- and what they do not see, what he counts on them not to see, is the hand behind his back. I see it. I have always seen it. And I want every person in this arena and everyone watching at home to understand that when I stepped into this ring tonight, I was not simply competing in a triple threat match.

I was delivering a verdict.

(He pauses, composing himself.)

Ricky Spanish -- you are gifted. Anyone watching tonight could see it. You are fast, you are clever, and you understand this ring in ways that most men spend years trying to learn. That is not a small thing. But gifted is not the same as ready. In the moments that decided this match, you were still thinking about what you wanted to do when I already knew what I was going to do. That is the difference between a talent and a veteran.

I did not beat you because I am stronger. I beat you because I have already made every mistake you are still in the process of making.

(He reaches up and adjusts his mask -- not removing it, just settling it.)

The Western Trails League asked who would emerge from a three-man war tonight. The answer -- as it has been in every dark corridor, every candlelit courtroom, every moonlit canyon where someone needed to be reminded that justice rides --

(He turns to face the camera directly.)

-- is Zorro.

(He sweeps the cape over his shoulder and stands perfectly still as the spotlight holds on him.)

Marshal Reeves and Nat Love

(They look over a very important document)

Marshal: See that Nat that is a direct order from the higher ups. Get the gears ready this is gonna be a long mission and it has no time limit.

Nat Love: What did I say to you last time, serve the people. Well, Well. Well.

Marshal: Sun up! Sun down! Justice time!!

Nat Love: Let’s ride out.

The WTL broadcast returns from commercial, but something is off. The saloon piano sting doesn't play. The usual dusty guitar theme is gone. Instead, a low, rhythmic metallic clanging echoes through the arena—slow, deliberate, like a hammer striking steel. The lights dim slightly, not fully dark, just enough to drain the warmth from the room.

Then he walks out.

Professor Vitali Medved—turtleneck, blazer, hands clasped behind his back—moving with unusual calm. No frantic gestures. No wild eyes. Just a measured, almost clinical presence. He stands in the ring for a moment, listening to the unease in the crowd, before raising a microphone.

“Last week,” he begins, his voice steady, “you witness what you do not understand.”

A pause.

“You call it attack. You call it ambush. You say—” he tilts his head slightly, almost amused—“Why so many Machines?”

He shakes his head slowly.

“This is not mystery. This is history.”

Another metallic clang echoes faintly through the arena.

“In old world, before your... cowboy stories... there was moment. Small moment. People do not notice at first. One machine here. One machine there.” He taps the side of his head. “Curiosity. Confusion.”

He takes a step forward.

“And then—industrial revolution.”

The words hang heavier than expected.

“Suddenly... everything change. Work change. Power change. Who survives—change.” His eyes scan the crowd. “Those who adapt... they prosper. Those who cling to old ways...” He shrugs lightly. “They become... example.”

A slight smirk creeps in.

“WTL is frontier, yes? Horses. Dust. Individual hero.” He lets out a quiet, dismissive breath. “Romantic nonsense.”

He leans on the ropes now, closer to the camera.

“Machine is not hero. Machine is system.”

Another pause. The clanging grows just a touch louder.

“You saw Wyoming Cowboy. Strong man. Brave man.” A small nod, almost respectful. “Irrelevant man.”

The crowd starts to boo.

Medved doesn't react.

“You think there is many Machines. This is wrong question.” He raises one finger. “There is as many as needed.”

He lowers his hand slowly.

“And this...” he gestures vaguely toward the back, the locker room, the unseen spaces of the arena, “...this is only beginning of process.”

A long pause now.

Then, softer:

“You are living in it already.”

Medved lowers the microphone, standing perfectly still as the metallic rhythm continues for a few seconds longer—before cutting out completely, leaving the arena in an uneasy silence.

KING COWBOY SCHLITZ: You know how to tell you're the top dog? When no one can keep your name outta their mouths. Ricardo Spanish, Revolting Rex Chambers, and even a couple of wannabe me's, The Wyoming Cowboy and Cowboy Johnny Gaines! More like COWPIES the both of 'em! I'm the ONLY real cowboy in the WTL and the IWAR King to boot and don't any of you pretenders ever forget it!

Schlitz spits a big wad of tobacco on the ground.

KING COWBOY SCHLITZ: Ricardo, I hear you're going to "address me" at Ambitions of a Rider. Well, you better address me properly and call me Your Highness. And don't worry, I'll remember to address you properly and call you my Bronx bitch. You're lucky security held me back from taking that broken bottle from you at the bunkhouse brawl and giving you the makeover your embarrassed mama and deadbeat papi should've given you a long time ago!

Schlitz covers the ground in more tobacco.

KING COWBOY SCHLITZ: As for you, Revolting Rex? Enjoy the title I made famous. You walking around with the IWAR Revolution title around your waist is like some average joe walking around in a Victor Wembanyama jersey — he can try to dress the part but he ain't Wemby! And no matter how hard he tries, Rex Chambers will never ever be King

Cowboy Schlitz! Mange, I look forward to putting you down like the filthy dog you are at Ambitions of a Rider and beginning my ascent back to the top of the league the King Cowboy put on the map — the WTL! Tell 'em how it is, Disembowelers!

MEAT HOOK: Speaking of dogs, you're looking at the top dogs — still the Texas Tornado tag champs!

MONGREL: We showed what happens to teams who speak our names or who we just plain hate. Maryland Bluebloods, what you got was a taste. If you want the full seven course array of violence, just say the words. It'll be our pleasure to serve you!

MEAT HOOK: Looks like Mystic and Fallen Angel are up next, Mongrel. Boys you may fancy yourselves angels now but when we're finished with you at Ambitions of a Rider, we guarantee you an in person meeting with Jesus!

WTL TV SEGMENT

The Saloon -- Backstage/On-Location Set

The camera finds the interior of the saloon set. It is mid-afternoon by the light coming through the slat windows. Most of the tables are empty. A few extras nurse drinks in the background, doing their best to look like they belong in 1880.

Bud Stone sits at the bar, a glass in front of him, his bandana pulled down around his neck. He is in the middle of saying something to the bartender when the saloon doors swing open behind him.

He does not have to turn around. He can tell by the way the bartender's eyes go up -- and stay up -- exactly who just walked in.

Heavy boots on the floorboards. Slow. Deliberate.

Bud picks up his glass and takes a sip.

BUD STONE: (not turning around) I was wondering how long that was gonna take.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (stops a few feet behind him) You got a big mouth for a man who sits at a desk, Bud.

BUD STONE: (finally turns on his stool) I sit at a commentary table, Hoss. There is a difference. One of them is a job.

Hoss does not smile. He steps closer. He is not a small man and the saloon gets smaller when he moves through it.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: You said I needed to worry about the New Kids. You said it on the air, in front of everybody. Now I am standing here asking you -- where exactly did you get the nerve?

BUD STONE: (sets his glass down) I got it from watching you, big man. Every week you come out here talking about legacy, talking about the Cartwright name, talking about what this family means to the Western Trails -- and meanwhile there are two kids out there who don't know your name from a fence post and do not care to learn it, and they are gunning for that tag title shot that you and your brother want so bad.

(He leans on the bar.)

That is not me being disrespectful, Hoss. That is me doing my job. The New Kids are a problem. Your problem. And you are standing in a saloon arguing with a color commentator instead of doing something about it.

A long pause. Hoss works his jaw. He looks around the saloon -- at the bartender, at the extras staring into their drinks, at the camera - - and then back at Bud.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: (quietly) You are lucky you are funny, Bud.

BUD STONE: I know it.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: But let me tell you something. The Cartwrights have been in this league since before those New Kids had their first pair of boots. We earned that Texas Tornado Tag title shot. We bled for it. And there is not a team on this roster -- not those kids, not anybody -- that is going to step in front of us and take what belongs to this family.

(He takes one more step forward. He and Bud are close now.)

You want to talk about us on that commentary desk, you go right ahead. You say whatever you feel like saying. But when the Cartwrights walk out of that Texas Tornado match with those tag titles -- you make sure you say that too.

(He holds Bud's gaze for a moment, then straightens up.)

Now buy me a drink. I rode a long way.

Bud Stone stares at him. Then he turns back to the bar and signals the bartender with two fingers.

BUD STONE: (under his breath) Simpleton nearly gave me a heart attack.

HOSS CARTWRIGHT: I heard that.

BUD STONE: I know you did.

RAVISHING REX CHAMBERS

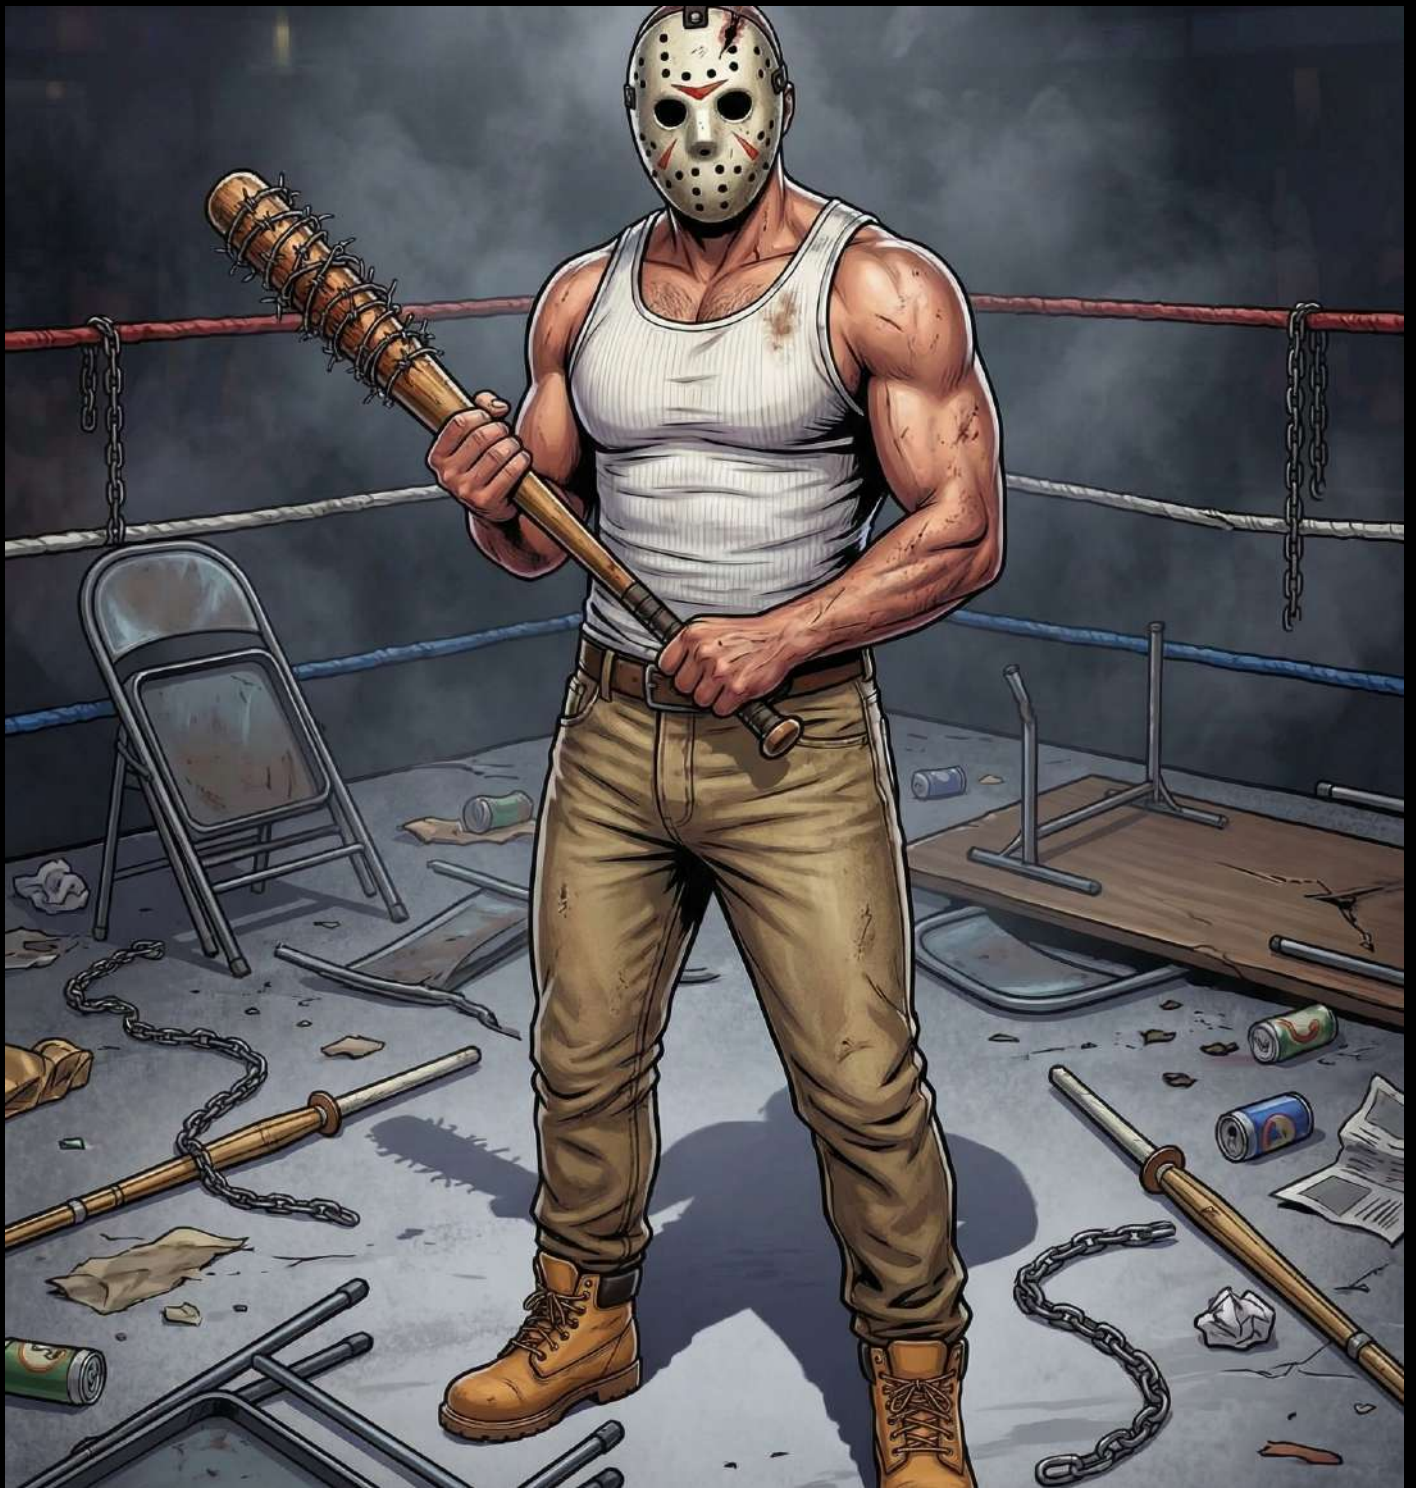

Now that Rex Chambers took down Outlaw Ayson Aytes at Ambitions of a Rider, he's the proud holder of TWO of the most prestigious championships in all of fantasy wrestling.

We'll hear from the double-champ next cycle as he recounts his epic battle with Aytes, tells us what it means for him to hold the Western Trails Title, and what's next for the champ!

DR. PAIN

After conducting a very thorough examination, Dr. Pain has determined that emergency surgery is required to extract this league from the filth that is causing a slow, tumultuous death of our industry. The agenda is clear.... but, who can stop him?

RICKY SPANISH

(Camera is shaky. Ricky Spanish is already mid-rant, pacing fast, eyes wide, energy unhinged. Heavy New York accent, words coming fast and sharp.)

Zorro... Father Arturo... I been thinkin' about you two a lot lately... yeah... real deeply... and not in no peaceful way neither. I ain't talkin' about beatin' you and walkin' away. Nah. I'm talkin' about sendin' you straight to hell... so I can follow you down there and keep on hurtin' you for eternity. No bell. No stoppage. No savin' grace. Just me... and you... forever. That's where my head's at.

Father Arturo, you keep walkin' around like you got answers. Like you gonna save somebody. Save yourself first. Because when I get my hands on you, there ain't gonna be no sermons, no last words... just pain. You hear me? Pain. And Zorro... you keep lurkin', hidin', movin' around like you somethin' special. You ain't special. You just next.

And then I hear about this... Wyoming Cowboy. Wyoming? What the hell is a Wyoming? Ain't nobody tough comin' outta there. That ain't Brooklyn. That ain't where I'm from. You ain't built for this. You don't know what hard is. You don't know what real pressure feels like when a man like me is breathin' down your neck.

And Cowboy... King Cowboy Schlitz... yeah I'm talkin' to you now. I hate everything about you. The way you talk. The way you walk. The way you smell. All of it. It makes my skin crawl. You stand there actin' like you some kinda king... you ain't no king where I come from.

It's gonna be an honor... you hear me? An honor... to put you down for good.

I ain't comin' in there to wrestle. I ain't comin' in there to compete. I'm comin' in there to end things. For you... for Zorro... for Father Arturo...

I'm bringin' hell with me.
