NONSTOP ACTION LEAGUE

COMMISSIONER REPORT – NOVEMBER 2024

NAL PRIZE:

- ❖ IWA credit for the league champion when there are at least 50 cards: $1 for every 3 cards and $1 for every 4 battle royal entrants (up to $50)

Welcome to the November NAL commissioner's report.

The first cycle of the finals for the 2024 Best of the Best tournament saw Frank Belcher score a win in all 3 categories. Will Adam bounce back this cycle or will Frank pull further ahead?

As announced on the IWA dungeon Facebook page, I will be stepping down as NAL commissioner after the conclusion of the 2024 BotB tournament. If you're interested in taking over (and presumably running the 2025 tournament) please message me ASAP.

Dr. Pain's Promo for the NAL

[The camera pans over the arena before settling on Dr. Pain standing in the ring, the NAL Regional Championship proudly displayed around his waist. The crowd roars with a mix of cheers and boos as he raises a microphone to speak, his presence commanding.]

Dr. Pain:

You know, it's funny being me. Everywhere I go, people look at this [he taps the Regional Championship] and they think they understand what it means. But trust me, you don't understand this gold until you've earned it, until you've fought for it, until you've bled for it. And that's exactly what I've done every single time I step into this ring.

[Dr. Pain glares at the camera with an intense smirk.]

Dr. Pain:

But tonight, I'm not here to talk about me. Nah, tonight, I'm here to talk about my ally, my brother in arms, the man who's about to take this Battle of the Belts tournament by storm: Adam.

[The crowd lets out a cheer as Adam's name is mentioned.]

Dr. Pain:

Adam, you and I? We're cut from the same cloth. We're not about flash, we're about results. While everyone else is busy running their mouths, posting on social media, or striking poses, you've been grinding, putting in the work, and leaving a trail of broken egos and shattered dreams behind you. That's why I know—I know—this tournament is yours to take.

[He pauses, letting his words sink in before continuing.]

Dr. Pain:

To everyone in that locker room who thinks they've got a shot in this tournament, let me make it simple for you: You don't. Adam isn't stepping into that ring for second place, and he's damn sure not stepping in there alone. He's got the backing of the most dangerous man in the NAL—the Doctor. And when you've got pain on your side, you don't just compete... you dominate.

[Dr. Pain takes a slow lap around the ring, his intensity rising.]

Dr. Pain:

So to anyone foolish enough to think they can stop Adam, let me give you some advice: Don't bother. Save yourself the embarrassment, save yourself the hospital bill, and save yourself the pain of stepping into that ring. Because whether it's a headlock, a hammerlock, or a knockout, Adam's coming for the win. And I'm standing right here, ready to watch him carve through the competition like a scalpel.

[Dr. Pain unhooks his Regional Championship and holds it up for the crowd to see.]

Dr. Pain:

Adam, you've got the heart of a champion, and I know you'll walk out of that tournament with your head held high. The world is about to see what I already know—you're not just a contender; you're a force.

[He turns back to the camera, his face full of conviction.]

Dr. Pain:

So go out there and do what you do best, Adam. Make them hurt. Make them feel it. And remind everyone in the NAL that when you stand with me, greatness isn't optional—it's guaranteed.

[Dr. Pain tosses the mic aside as his music hits. He raises the Regional Championship high, glaring into the camera with an intense, confident look before stepping out of the ring.]
