SHL Towers

⋮ We are now into Round 2 for the Comic Fusion: Continental title. Reminder the Triple Crown tag team titles will be defended in a mandatory defense in SHL 473! The Hardcore title is now defunct and the Captain is introducing a title more fitting of what we do in the SHL. So starting this point forward the newest SHL title is the

Teddy Steed:

So excited to call this match against three incredible competitors. I expect the two EDGE boys to throw caution to the wind. Sierra Flowers:

Kiera Hogan

I don't see it that way Teddy if the two EDGE boys are like me I would double team Santa and get him out of here. Exactly the two men are double teaming Santa hitting him with an explosive double clothesline and double suplex. Boogie Woogie paying homage to the Honky Tonk Man delivers the Shake Rattle and Roll which sends Santa straight of the ring. Teddy Steed: Yeah, but the two are starting to look at each other, both men are staring at the championship belt. Santa: Ain't Christmas, yet fellas. Hey it ain't even Christmas in July yet. Santa double knocks the Boogie Woogie into Shaggy 2 Dope. Santa Russian Sidesweeps Shaggy and then Irish whips Boogie Woogie into the guardrail. Santa: Here's a real present. Teddy Steed: He is wrapping Boogie Woogie are into the guard rail. Ouch! Now he rings the arm up in down to cut off the blood flow. The arm isn't suppose to go like that. Santa is headed back to the ring. Boogie Woogie looks mad.

Sierra Flowers: That's because both members of EDGE have been shown up. Shaggy delivers an incredible standing dropkick that sends Santa into a neutral corner. What in the World! Now he has him in a Gator roll. That is an ole school amauter wrestling move. Shaggy 2 Dope: Now whose the child Santa!! Now he follows we a series of German Suplexes and culminates with a Fisherman Suplex pin attempt 1,2. Boogie Woogie breaks the pin attempt. The two men are jawing and now they both throw lefts and rights.

: See Siera things are now playing out the way I thought it would. These two men are fighting for a new title. This legacy defining stuff there is no points for teamwork. Santa tries to slip in with a roll up. Just a two count and it would have been terrible if he had won because the others are paying attention. Shaggy hits Santa with a Tiger bomb and then a Sideway Slam. 1,2. Boogie Woogie breaks up the count with a spectacular Swanton Bomb. He dumps his partner to the side. He's collecting up the garage. 1,2,3. Oh my word we have a new and the winner of this match and the

1st SHL Fusion Continental: EDGE: Boogie Woogie Wu

Just announced SVL- Recharged will feature the Triple Crown champ vs it's Iron Champ. Yes business is pickin-up!!

Good Luck everyone!!

Off to Dagobah

(Aboard the Super Star Destroyer Opulence, the six sisters of the Gray Jedi sit at a long table. At the head sits Queen Maladi, her hands steepled, several of her fingers draped with gold rings and exotic, ostentatious, and most importantly, expensive, precious gems sparkling in the pale light of her throne room. Her crimson face is unreadable. She finally revealed the story of Atroxia's past. A tremendous weight has lifted from the Queen's chest, yet she is still concerned. 'I have been unburdened by what has been, May the will of The Force be done.' Maladi thinks as her eyes lock with the blood red eyes of the Chiss. Maladi exhales a long breath she did not realize she was holding.

Down at the opposite end of the table, Atroxia inhales deeply and shuts her eyes. The dreams that started as visions and turned into nightmares have culminated. Her logical, AI driven mind turning over and analyzing each word Queen Maladi spoke. 'It makes sense. My first memories were waking up on Sister Talon's operating table. I recall nothing before that until the dreams infected me. The Queen is a master manipulator, yet I detect no deceptiveness from her or my other sisters. If I was strong in The Force before, it makes sense that I may be stronger now considering the advanced circuitry and AI placed in my brain. What would happen if I challenged one of my sisters to a duel? It is logical to assume I would have an advantage.'

(Atroxia runs her tongue over her lips.)

Assassin Atroxia: "Even with my cybernetic brain implants and AI, this is a large amount of data to analyze at once Your Majesty. I do not know what to feel as I have not felt emotions since my transformation. Logically, I should feel anger towards all of you for fighting me five against one. Statistically, it is likely I would not have survived those odds and would have been another dead Jedi. Yet instead of killing me, you chose to implant advanced technology and AI into my brain making me what I am today. I feel a perverse sense of what sentient beings know as gratitude. I am grateful that I am still alive. The definitions of sadness and grief come to mind as well. It is logical for an individual to be sad and grieving over losing their memories of their former life. Yet I feel an emptiness within me. Yes, I felt emotional when the dreams came. I have no memories of being a Jedi, yet I must have been because I saw it in the dreams. How did I manage to dream? Sister Jade told me with all the surgical cybernetic implants I have in my brain, I am unable to dream."

(Duchess Talon spreads her hands and opens her palms towards Atroxia.)

Duchess Talon: "Advanced cerebral implants and AI can make an individual the most advanced concepts in mathematics and science. The technology inside your brain Sister Assassin is unparalleled. Think of what it has helped you carry out so far.

"You can calculate a hyperspace jump to anywhere in the universe in a few seconds without the aid of a navigation computer. You can learn advanced calculus within minutes and be able to teach it at the finest universities on Coruscant. You can memorize scientific formulas that create rare elements. You have mastered advanced combat, killing and flying techniques in half a year while it would take an average sentient being two or more decades to learn."

“However, even science and mathematics have their limitations. The realm of the supernatural reaches beyond what the empirical senses can reveal. Did you think I would forsake my knowledge of sorcery just because we renounced the ways of the Sith? Did you think I would discard my literature and holocrons of arcane, forbidden Sith rituals? I knew I would need them someday.”

Atroxa: “You put a spell on me?”

Talon: “In simplistic terms, yes. I used my knowledge of forbidden Sith rituals and sorcery to make you experience dreams. If I want to eat a hawk-bat egg omelette, I need to break a few hawk-bat eggs. That’s what I did, I broke hawk-bat eggs.”

(Baroness Vestara emits a growl from her throat at the mention of the analogy.)

Talon: “It’s only an analogy Vestara! I didn’t break any hawk-bat eggs.”

Atroxa: “Why not just tell me outright? Why use the dreams?”

Talon: “Two reasons first, I wanted you to experience emotions for short periods again. The emotions you felt for a brief period helped you remember the dreams with more clarity. Second, I was afraid too much data given to you at once might overload your cerebral implants which could cause short circuiting and damage the main hardware in your brain which could have caused permanent damage or worse. The Queen gave you a brief overview just now and I can see you are having trouble processing the data.”

Atroxa: “Why tell me about my past now? Is there an ulterior motive that I’m not seeing?”

Talon: “That is not for me to answer.”

Maladi: “When we chose the path of the Gray Jedi, I thought it only fair that you knew about your past. Once you had the information, you could choose your own path in your life. Choose Atroxa, will you remain with us? Will you wander the galaxy as a bounty hunter? Will you try to kill us like you did when you were a Jedi? You have the freedom to do as you please. You’re an asset to us Atroxa. Losing a being with your abilities will be a severe blow to us. I won’t hold you back. May the will of the Force be done.”

(Atroxa pauses for a minute.)

Atroxa: “You’re Majesty, you said the duel was the five of you against me, correct?”

Maladi: “Yes, and we found it extremely difficult.”

Atroxa: “The odds were heavily stacked against me, would you agree?”

Maladi: “We were Sith at the time. When have Sith ever cared about being fair Sister Assassin?”

Atroxa: “A one on one duel would have evened the odds.”

Maladi:(Growing impatient) “Our goal was to defeat you by any means necessary! You nearly killed Jade and Lumiya fighting against the five of us! Each of us fighting you one on one would have been considered suicide. You were too strong!”

Atroxa: “If I were strong then would you agree that I may be stronger now Your Majesty?”

Maladi: (Growing frustrated) “Logically I would tend to agree. What does it matter now Atroxa? The past is buried. Look forward on your journey through life!”

Atroxa: “I don’t know how to walk away Sister Queen. If I want to leave the Royal Court, I must earn it.”

Maladi: (Yelling with fury) “EARN IT? SISTER ASSASSIN WHAT ARE YOU PROPOSING?”

Atroxa: “I challenge one of you to a duel. No killing involved. The one who forces her opponent to give up is the winner. If I win, I will earn my way out of service to the Gray Jedi. If I lose, I vow to be your weapon of destruction until I meet The Maker!”

Maladi: “Atroxa, have you gone mad? It doesn’t have to be this way.”

Atroxa: “Sister Queen, I must insist. I am a warrior. Warriors don’t walk away from anything. I was brought into your fold unwillingly and if I wish to leave, I’ll fight my way out! It is the way of the warrior.”

Maladi: “Sisters, who wishes to volunteer?”

(Baroness Vestara raises her hand. The Queen crimson face breaks into a huge smile.)

Maladi: “Once again, my apprentice makes me proud! Vestara readily accepts your challenge Atroxa.”

Atroxa: “I figured she would. The teacher facing the student. I am looking forward to our meeting.”

Maladi: “We need to set up a code of ethics for this. Atroxa, you said there will be no killing, correct?”

Atroxa: “No killing. To win one must force the other to submit and acknowledge defeat. Keep in mind, there will be injuries. How severe only The Maker knows.”

Maladi: “Understood. What else?”

Atroxa: “Vestara and I are masters of Jar’Kai. However, for this duel, each participant will wield one lightsaber.”

(Maladi looks to Vestara who nods in agreement.)

Atroxa: “Third rule, No Trakata.”

Maladi: “That goes without saying. Of course, no Trakata. My apprentice would never stoop so low!”

Atroxa: “I just want it on record that we formally agree Your Majesty, that’s all.”

Maladi: “It is on the record and agreed upon. Anything else?”

Atroxa: (Contemplating for a moment) “Yes, we need to duel on a planet that is strong within The Force.”

Maladi: “Did you have a particular planet in mind?”

Atroxa: “No, but I know someone with enough knowledge to make a good suggestion.”

(All eyes turn to Duchess Talon. Talon pulls her datapad from her cloak along with a handheld holoprojector.)

Talon: “There is a planet that will do nicely.” (Talon taps a few buttons on her datapad. A planet colored mostly green with shades of blue and gray emits from the holoprojector.)

Talon: “This is Dagobah. It’s a remote, unexplored planet in the Sulis sector of the Outer Rim Territories found in the Dagobah system, hence its name. It consists of murky swamps and forests. According to its history, it has had a strong connection to The Force. The planet’s atmosphere consists of violent lightning storms and dense fog. Navigating through it may be difficult. The temperature is not ideal for a duel, hot and humid. Right now, it is experiencing its dry season, which is better than dueling during torrential rains. It is home to many animals and plant life, which could explain its powerful force presence. Of all planets in the galaxy, Dagobah has the strongest presence in The Force and it’s not even close.”

Atroxa: “Very good. Dagobah will suffice if we agree.”

Maladi: “Agreed. How far away are we?”

Talon: “With our hyperdrive capabilities, a day and a half.”

Maladi: “There is no way Opulence will land on that slimy, rock.”

Countess Jade: “The Jade’s Vengeance is available for transport Sister Queen. My only concern is navigating through its turbulent atmosphere.”

Atroxa: “I can navigate a ship through anything. That won’t be an issue.”

Maladi: “I still disapprove of this duel, but I must put my faith in The Force.”

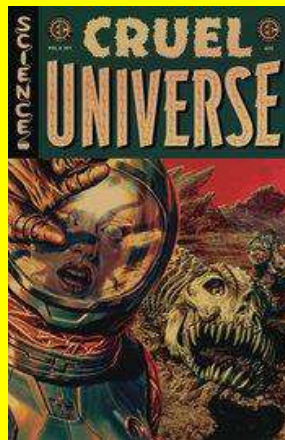

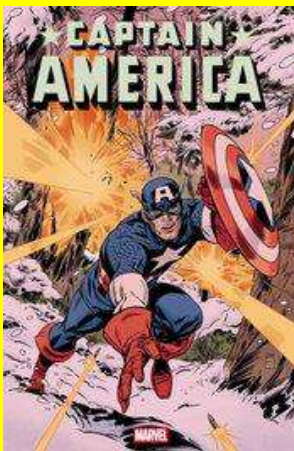

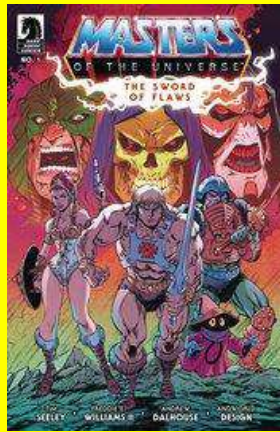

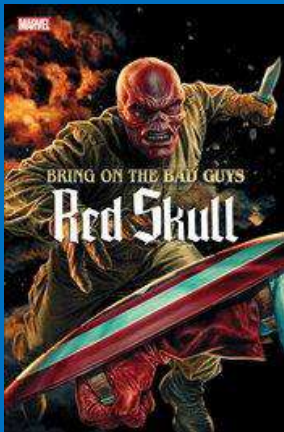

(Countess Jade pulls out her comlink)

Jade: “Commander Vance, this is Supreme Commander Jade. Please set Opulence on course to the Dagobah system.”

Commander Vance: “Right away Supreme Commander.”

SPINNER RACK

THESE AND MANY MORE AVAILABLE AT A COMIC BOOK STORE NEAR YOU!

The clang of steel echoed across the Manhattan construction site, now deserted except for three figures: one a lithe silhouette of focused fury, the others musclebound menaces.

Psylocke adjusted the crimson sash at her waist, boots planted on a steel beam thirty feet up. Below her, The Ringer spun his shimmering golden hoops like a carnival reject with delusions of grandeur. Beside him, Steeplejack cracked his reinforced rivet gun, biceps bulging under a sleeveless work shirt stained with crime.

"Can't believe we got ourselves a psychic gymnast," Steeplejack muttered. "Ain't that just our luck, Ringer?"

The Ringer smirked, circling her with glowing rings. "She's just one girl. We've taken down Avengers. This is a warm-up."

Psylocke leapt down in a single, graceful arc, landing between the pair with ninja precision. Her psychic blade ignited from her right fist, humming with pink fire.

"You're in over your heads, boys. Walk away now, or I'll make your minds regret staying."

Steeplejack lunged, swinging the rivet gun like a club. She dodged, side-flipping and raking her blade across the weapon, shorting it with a psychic surge. Sparks flew as it exploded in his hands, sending him tumbling into a heap of scaffolding. The Ringer lashed out, golden hoops zipping through the air. Psylocke caught one mid-spin, channeling her focus—and shattered it with raw psionic power. The shockwave dropped him to his knees, clutching his temples.

"You can't— you shouldn't be able to—"

"I can. And I just did."

In minutes, it was over. Two would-be world-beaters laid out like yesterday's trash, and Betsy Braddock—Psylocke—stood tall beneath the unfinished skyline, the night wind whipping her violet hair.

She tapped her communicator. "Professor, it's done. They were trying to destabilize the steelworkers' union. Nothing the X-Men couldn't handle, but I wanted to stretch my legs."

A pause. Then Professor X's voice replied, "Well done, Betsy. Come home."

She turned to the rising moon, psychic blade dimming.

"Tomorrow," she whispered. "Tonight... I enjoy the city."

The Ringer's Diary (Unpublished)

May 3rd. Got beat up by She-Hulk. Again. Note to self: reinforced hoops do NOT block gamma fists.

May 5th. Applied to rejoin the Sinister Syndicate. Rejected. Again. Apparently, I'm "not sinister enough."

May 6th. Ran into Steeplejack at a dive bar. He says I need to stop fighting telepaths. He's got a point.

May 9th – The Hoops Don't Lie - Tested the new voice-controlled boomerang rings. They don't work. One came back and knocked me into a hot dog stand. Pretty sure someone got it on tape. Might go viral. Maybe that's my superpower?

May 15th – New Duds, Same Luck - Tried teaming with The Hypno-Hustler. Terrible idea. Crowd thought we were a wedding band. Psylocke knocked us out before the second chorus.

May 21st – Hope Is a Heavy Hoop - I found an old message from Stilt-Man: "Keep fighting, little man. We're all skyscrapers on the inside."

I cried a little. Then I got mugged.

Redline

Real Name: [Buried in ash. Doesn't matter anymore.]

Occupation (Former): Firefighter, Engine Company 47

Current Role: Street-level vigilante, unofficial first responder, urban myth

Backstory (Condensed):

Redline was a firefighter who pushed too far into a warehouse blaze trying to save his crew. It collapsed. He walked out. They didn't.

The city said it was arson, then buried the case. Redline never did.

Now he works alone, responding to fires the city won't answer, stopping violence before it spreads like kindling. No mask. No costume. Just a burned jacket, a reinforced Halligan bar, and eyes that haven't slept in years.

Look:

Fire-resistant gear with patches torn off

Soot-smeared, with melted reflective striping

Carries a beat-up radio and tools turned weapons

Wears no mask—scars are part of the uniform

Fighting Style:

Close quarters, improvised weapons, brutal efficiency—like a man who knows how fast fire can spread and ends things before it does.

Signature Weapon:

Modified Halligan bar—sharpened and reinforced, his Excalibur calls it “47,” after the crew he lost

Haunt:

Lives in the shell of an old firehouse—walls scorched, siren long dead, but the bell still works.

Dear Charley:

Thanks very much for your letter of the fourteenth and for the copies of the new feature. I think they are remarkable and I want to congratulate you on "Wonder Woman."

With best wishes, believe me,

Sincerely yours,
Gene

BITS OF "LEGIONNAIRE BUSINESS"

The three new super-characters who appear in this issue's feature story were thought up by three of our readers, who submitted the ideas to the "Bits of Legionnaire Business" department we used to run in this magazine. The creators of these characters were: James Vincent, Fairfax, Va.—BLACK-OUT BOY; Tony Edwards, Yuma, Ariz.—STAR LAD; Bill Martin, Milwaukee, Wis.—MAGNETIC BOY.

In the past, we have occasionally used other heroes suggested by our readers. For instance, the very first "bit of business" submitted was POLAR BOY, who became leader of the Legion of Substitute Heroes. We intend to use still others in the future.

Here are some of the better "bits of Legionnaire business" sent in by readers in the past: Lucinda Briggs, Port Alsworth, Alaska: "TELEPORT GIRL . . . she possesses the unique ability to teleport herself anywhere, through time, space and matter." . . . David Dickhereber, Wentzville, Mo.: "RADAR LAD, a boy who can detect any object and pinpoint its location on the map." . . . Janet Hein, West N.Y., N.J.: "CREATIVE GIRL . . . she has the power of creating anything she wishes." . . . Bill Hodges, Huntsville, Ala.: "VIBRATORY BOY . . . his power consists of emitting vibratory pulsations with which he can shatter any object." . . . Ronald Domsy, Philadelphia, Pa.: "MOLECULE BOY . . . he can re-arrange the molecules of any object to form something else; for instance, he could change a crook's ray gun into a harmless pencil."

Bob Marcus, East Meadow, L.I.: "BRITTLE BOY, who can break himself into hundreds of pieces and then re-unite." . . . Mike Witherspoon, Weatherford, Tex.: "KEY KID, a lad who has the power of opening any lock with his fingers." . . . Matthew Maynard, Seattle, Wash.: "NATURE BOY . . . he can cause tidal waves, stop waterfalls, make volcanoes erupt." . . . Jeff Greenberg, Los Angeles, Calif.: "COLOR KID . . . he can change himself or any object to any color of the spectrum." . . . Barbara Reed, Yuma City, Calif.: "ATOMIC KID . . . he has the power of atomic radiation and the explosive force of an atomic bomb." . . . Roger Ho, New York, N.Y.: "VOCAL WHIZ . . . he can perfectly imitate anyone's voice." . . . Randy Steele, Tunkhan Rock, Pa.: "CYCLONE KING . . . he can create twisters, monsoons, typhoons, etc." . . . Peter Sipchen, Richardson, Tex.: "SLOW-MOTION KID . . . he has the power to slow down any moving object or person."

J. Adam King, Yellow Springs, Ohio: "DEGREE DAMSEL . . . she has the power to alter the temperature of anything." . . . Jeff Baker, Ft. Worth, Tex.: "MEDIC MASTER . . . he can cure any disease or illness." . . . Dennis Persica, New Orleans, La.: "BIRD GIRL . . . she has the power of doing anything that any bird can do." . . . Rex Osborne, Essex, England: "TIME GIRL . . . she possesses the power to alter time and evolution." . . . Tom Kegley, St. Paul, Minn.: "BLOCKADE BOY . . . he can change himself into an invulnerable steel wall of any size or shape." . . . Greg Flood, Needham, Mass.: "EARTHQUAKE LAD . . . has the power to create earthquakes." . . . R. Goo, San Bernardino, Calif.: "OMNIBOY . . . he can travel on and under land, beneath the sea, and in air or space."

Mike Jones, Orlando, Fla.: "BAT BOY . . . like his namesake, the bat, he has the power of hearing supersonic frequencies." . . . Eddie Jones, Rogersville, Tenn.: "DIMENSION DAMSEL . . . she has the power to visit the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th dimensions." . . . Roberta Davidson, New Shrewsbury, N.J.: "SONG GIRL . . . she can charm any person into obeying her orders by singing to them."

Our thanks to those who contributed these and other suggestions. If you have any original "Bits of Legionnaire Business," send them on a postal card and we'll publish the best ones in The Legion Outpost. Also, we'll have author Edmond Hamilton put many of them into his Legion stories. Send all cards to: THE LEGION OUTPOST, National Periodical Publications, 575 Lexington Ave., N. Y., N.Y. 10022.

WHO IS HE??

Fade in: The sun leans low over a forgotten ghost town. Dust curls down a dirt road like it's got nowhere left to go. Cowboy Johnny Gaines sits on the porch of a weathered general store, boots kicked up on an old whiskey barrel. A slow, lonesome polka drifts from the concertina in his lap, rising soft and steady into the wide-open sky. He sets the instrument down gently, looks out across the empty main street, then straight into the camera.

"Some heroes wear capes... I prefer cowboy boots and spurs."

Speaking low, not whispering, but measured—like every word has weight behind it.

"Out here, we don't run from the storm—we ride straight into it. I've lived hard. Fought harder. Got dust in my lungs and callouses on my hands from holdin' on when the world tried to buck me off. But I ain't never asked for pity. I never needed gold to know my worth. I'm in this fight for honor. For the folks who don't get a spotlight. For the ones who work quiet, stand tall, and never flinch when it gets hard."

He leans forward, elbows on his knees, voice steady as the horizon.

"This Triple Crown Championship Title? It ain't about me tryin' to be a star. It's about remindin' folks what it means to deserve one. You want flash and fireworks, look elsewhere. But if you're lookin' for a man who'll bleed to make the world a little more just—then you're lookin' at him."

He picks up the concertina again, draws out a slow chord. Wind kicks up a swirl of dirt in the street, like the town itself is leanin' in to listen.

"Name's Cowboy Johnny Gaines. You might not cheer my name. But when it's all said and done... you'll damn sure remember it."
