MAIN EVENT

TRIPLE CROWN CHAMPIONSHIP:

“The Samoan Nightmare” Manuia © vs. Rich “Corinthian” Leather

In a brutal, hard-hitting battle for the Triple Crown Championship, "The Samoan Nightmare" Manuia came into the ring like an unstoppable force—stoic, storm-eyed, and seemingly untouchable. But Rich "Corinthian" Leather brought something rare: a plan. Leather took punishment like a sinner on Sunday, but kept chopping the big man down, targeting the leg with surgical kicks and precision strikes. Manuia roared back late, but as he climbed the ropes for his signature splash, Leather sprang to life—leaping up, grabbing him mid-motion, and slamming him down with the Final Statement powerbomb. One! Two! Three! The crowd gasped as Rich Leather pulled off the shock of the season, stealing the title and the moment. Before Manuia could even sit up, the arena lights dimmed and a bolt of digital lightning cracked across the jumbotron—announcing:

RE-CHARGED – Live from Denver, Colorado!

"STAND DOWN, SOLDIERS!" That's it for War Games V—the battlefield's quiet, the smoke is thick, and only the strong are still standing. Whether you came for blood, glory, or just a front-row seat to the chaos, you got your money's worth. But don't get too comfortable, maggots—this war ain't over.

"NEXT MISSION: RE-CHARGED!"

We're headed straight to the Mile High City—Denver, Colorado—for a power surge you won't survive without scars. It's SVL vs. NSL vs. SHL in triple threat warfare where the altitude's high and the violence is higher. The main events are triple threat matches, the grudges are red-hot, and the pain's gonna echo from the peaks to the pavement. Stay sharp, stay mean—August is only a few tours away, and so is your next reckoning at RE-CHARGED!

BOOT CAMP V: FULL SALVO

“DROP AND GIVE ME BLOOD!” Coming this October, it's Boot Camp V: FULL SALVO—and this ain't just another pit stop on the tour, it's all-out war. The Snake Venom League is going scorched earth, throwing everything they've got into the fire to see who's tough enough, mean enough, and hungry enough to survive. Who's marching into December's End of the World as the main event? Who earns the golden target—their shot at the Triple Crown Championship and the Money Makers Champion? This is it, maggots. No retreat. No surrender. BOOT CAMP V is locked, cocked, and fully loaded!

COBRA CLUTCH: CLOSING STATEMENT

That's the mission briefing, soldiers. The battlefield's shifting, the stakes are climbing, and the weak are already falling behind. Titles will be tested, alliances will fracture, and only the toughest will earn their place in this war machine we call the SVL. Stay sharp, stay focused, and don't blink—your moment might be the next to detonate.

Dismissed.

VENOMROOT RISING

A G.I. Joe Short Story

The air was thick with rot and static.

Agent 86 crouched low in the marsh grass, binoculars pressed to his face. Through the fog, he could barely make out the edges of a strange metal dome rising out of the swamp like a blister. No lights. No sound. Just a low hum, like a power station underwater.

“This place gives me the creeps,” Recondo muttered, swatting away a dragonfly the size of his palm.

“Swamp this dense, they could hide a battleship in here,” Agent 86 said. “And Cobra’s got something way worse tucked in that shell.”

They’d come in quiet. HALO jump. Fan-boat insertion. The four-man Joe unit—Agent 86, Recondo, Lifeline, and Snake Eyes—was tasked with confirming the existence of Moccasin Nest, the rumored swamp base housing Project VENOMROOT.

They expected a small base. What they found was a jungle Frankenstein.

The water glowed faintly green. Strange vines with bulbous sacks throbbed along the banks. The insects moved wrong. The air itself felt thick with venom.

Then came the scream.

It wasn’t human. It wasn’t animal. It was a fusion—choked, guttural, enraged. Lifeline snapped his head toward it as something huge and fast tore through the water. A blur of scales and metal.

“Down!” Recondo shouted.

Scaleback slammed through their position like a freight train. Half-man, half-monster, armored in swamp-tanned leather and experimental Cobra tech, he flung Lifeline ten feet into a cypress trunk.

Snake Eyes engaged without hesitation, blade flashing, but Scaleback’s hide turned steel. The mutant roared and vanished back into the mist.

“Medical!” Agent 86 called.

Lifeline groaned. “I’m good—just cracked, not broken. But we are not alone out here.”

The Joes pushed forward, now moving fast. The swamp thickened around them—trees bent unnaturally, roots forming a kind of wall. They breached it.

And found Moccasin Nest.

Built into the swamp like a cancer, the facility rose in pieces—silos, fan-boat docks, labs on stilts, all wrapped in vines and Cobra steel. Everywhere, swamp troopers moved—Swamp-Vipers, geared in algae-camouflaged suits, carrying gas-rifles and toxin masks. On the docks, the unmistakable form of Copperhead barked orders beside his signature Water Moccasin, its fan idling like a beast in heat.

“Got eyes on the nest,” Agent 86 whispered into comms. “Copperhead confirmed. Recommend we—”

His voice cut off.

The mist thickened. Something moved.

They were surrounded.

What followed was chaos.

Swamp-Vipers opened fire from all angles. Recondo lobbed a thermite grenade into the underbrush, clearing a path. Snake Eyes vanished into the fog, only to reappear inside the base ten minutes later, disabling security cameras and unleashing havoc from within.

Agent 86 fought his way to the central lab. Inside, Dr. Mindbender, shirtless and wild-eyed, was draining a vat of glowing green liquid into pressurized pods.

“You’re too late, Lieutenant,” he sneered. “VENOMROOT is alive. It will be in the water supplies of six cities by dawn.”

Agent 86 raised his weapon. “Over my dead body.”

“That can be arranged.” Scaleback burst through a containment chamber, ribs heaving, claws wet with blood. He lunged.

But this time, Snake Eyes was ready. He dropped from the rafters, driving his blade deep into Scaleback’s shoulder. The beast howled. Agent 86 took the shot—two rounds into the mutagen tanks. Green fire exploded.

Alarms blared. Vats cracked. Water surged through the base.

Outside, Copperhead saw the rising waters and scowled. “They flooded it...”

He barked a retreat order, leaping into his Water Moccasin. Behind him, Zartan—disguised as a wounded Swamp-Viper—laughed and vanished into the treeline.

The Joes made it out barely, bruised and soaked, but alive.

Moccasin Nest went under, swallowed by the swamp it had tried to control. The files on VENOMROOT were destroyed—except one canister Lifeline had tucked into his kit.

Agent 86 looked at it grimly.

“Is it still active?”

Lifeline nodded. “This could change the battlefield forever.”

Agent 86 turned to Snake Eyes. “Then let’s make sure it never sees daylight.”

He tossed the canister into the fire.

Somewhere in a Cobra lab...

Dr. Mindbender leaned over a stasis tube.

Within it, something larger than a man shifted. Scaled. Breathing. He smiled.

“VENOMROOT is only the beginning.”

[CAMERA OPENS IN THE SWELTERING DARK—JUNGLE NOISES RISING. SOMETHING MOVES IN THE FOLIAGE. THEN—A FLASH OF EYES. A LOW GROWL. JUNGLE WOMAN STEPS FORWARD, HOLDING THE GREAT LAKES TITLE OVER HER SHOULDER.]

JUNGLE WOMAN (gritting her teeth): You feel that, Muriel Puddings? That vibration in your gut? That twitch in your neck? That's not fear, darling. That's instinct.

Because the food chain just shifted. I tore the syrup outta Waffle House Waitress Donna to take this Great Lakes title. She brought waffles. I brought war. Now I wear this belt like a trophy skull...because it is.

But you... You didn't earn your crown. You threw me out of that Battle Royal like I was table scraps, snuck in behind the chaos and slimed your way to the Money Makers Women's Championship.

I didn't forget that. And you damn sure didn't beat me. You wear that title like a prize pig in pearls—all polished, all pampered, all pretend, But there's no grace in a kingdom built on convenience. See, I don't care how many endorsements back you. I don't care how many sponsors sip tea in your skybox.

Because Jungle Woman doesn't climb the ladder. I shake it. I break it. And I snap every rung over your pre-packaged skull. You want to be queen of the Money Makers? Fine. But remember who's lurking just beyond the trees. Remember who's been waiting—watching—plotting.

I already proved I'm champion material. Now I'm coming for you, pudding cup. You may have won the title... But when I get my hands on you-- you'll lose everything else.

[SHE LICKS HER TEETH. THE GREAT LAKES TITLE GLINTS UNDER MOONLIGHT. THE HOWL RETURNS—LOW, VICIOUS, PROMISING.]

The jungle is coming for you. And this time— you don't get to run.

[CUT TO BLACK. HOWLER MONKEYS ARE HEARD]

[CAMERA OPENS IN A DINGY LOCKER ROOM. FLAG PATCHES ON THE WALL. STEELE STANDS FRONT AND CENTER, SHIRTLESS, TAPED FISTS, DOG TAGS SWINGING LIKE A METRONOME OF VIOLENCE.]

COMMANDER STEELE: King of Hardcore, huh? Slasher, I watched you eat barbed wire for breakfast. I saw you wrap chairs in chains and call it “therapy.” You used to bleed charisma. But now? Now you’re just bleeding. You strutted around here like some deathmatch messiah— but last night, Zartan didn’t just beat you...

He buried you. Face down. In your own kingdom. With your own crown shoved somewhere the sun don’t shine. Dreadnok Zartan doesn’t care about rules, rankings, or reality. He’s a monster. He doesn’t play the game—he eats the pieces. And you? You walked in with a bat and left with your pride duct-taped back together.

Hardcore? Buddy, that wasn’t hardcore. That was sad. You looked like a gas station Halloween decoration after he was done with you— all torn-up, hanging by a thread, and reeking of cheap fear and burnt hot dogs.

You think you’re still the man? You think anyone in the SVL locker room still fears the name “Slasher”? I’ll tell you what they fear now—They fear becoming you. A washed-up gimmick in a puddle of their own myth.

You want to prove you’re still the King of Hardcore? Good. Because Commander Steele doesn’t just break men—I put ‘em down like failed experiments. So go ahead, stitch yourself up. Glue your mask back together. Then look in the mirror, Slasher... and ask yourself:

“Did the King fall?” No. He got executed.

[STEELE SPITS, WIPES HIS MOUTH, AND WALKS OFF. CAMERA FADES OUT TO STATIC.]

It was a battle of discipline versus delusion. The Sarge, barking orders and marching down the ramp like a war-hardened tank, squared off against The Stepfather—SVL's overly friendly, cardigan-wearing, paddle-toting parody of paternal love. But tonight, there were no hugs and no chore charts—only pain.

From the opening bell, it was clear The Sarge wasn't here to play house. He opened fire with stiff forearms and brutal suplexes, each one thudding like artillery. The Stepfather, to his credit, fought back with his signature passive-aggressive offense—dad-joke taunts, a surprise clothesline, and a cringe-inducing "Time for a Talk" spinning backfist. But discipline does not bend to bedtime stories.

The turning point came outside the ring. The Sarge yanked off The Stepfather's cozy house slippers, tossed them into the crowd like used rations, and dragged him around ringside. He lined him up against the steel steps, stood over him like a drill instructor from hell—and then came the boot.

A nasty, mud-caked combat boot, worn from years of battle and bad intentions, ground across The Stepfather's face like a belt sander on a Sunday school craft project. The Sarge roared, "YOU WILL QUIT, MAGGOT!" as he pressed the sole harder against his opponent's cheek, twisting with mechanical cruelty.

The Stepfather's hands flailed—he didn't reach for the ropes (they wouldn't save him), he didn't reach for a weapon—he reached up, palm out, pleading, and finally screamed into the ref's mic:

"I QUIT! I QUIT! YOU'RE NOT MY REAL DAD!"

The bell rang. The crowd gasped. Some cheered, some booed, but all felt it. The Sarge stood tall, saluted the fallen, and shouted, "Honor always wins, punk!" before storming off, leaving The Stepfather broken, boot-printed, and rethinking every one of his fatherhood metaphors.

(The camera fades in on the aftermath of the recent SVL event in Casablanca. Hurricane has just conquered SOS's "Baddest American Hiker," Cliff Everest, and now strides backstage, Pacific Northwest Title slung over his shoulder like a trophy.

He walks the corridor slowly, passing the locker room doors of Rich Leather, Agent 86, Bud Hlavin, and Rod Cox. Each door gets a cold glare and a low, dismissive scoff.

Finally, Hurricane reaches his locker room. He throws open the door and sits on a battered folding chair. He stares into the camera, sweat glistening, eyes sharp.)

Hurricane:

Like a hurricane, I hit fast. I hit hard. I leave nothing standing.

I blew through Cliff Everest like he was a tree in my path. He felt the eye of the hurricane.

My war with SOS has only just begun. That's fine. I'll take them out the same way I took him—one by one.

(He leans forward slightly, eyes narrowing.)

And yet...

They've got me teaming with Rich Leather and Rod Cox at War Games?

Teaming. With SOS?

(Hurricane chuckles darkly, shaking his head.)

Hurricane:

I don't team.

I conquer.

I don't join SOS—I destroy it.

Can I trust them? No.

Can they trust me? Absolutely Not.

They're not partners. They're obstacles. And I specialize in blowing obstacles away.

(A sly smile creeps across his face.)

This was your territory.

Your league.

Your neighborhood.

(He rises to his feet, eyes locked on the lens.)

But it's mine now.

Hurricane (roaring):

PREPARE TO BE ERADICATED!

(The screen cuts to black as his voice echoes.)
